Dairy Champions Named In York

BY JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Trixie almost missed the whole thing.

As it was, the Tom Boyer family was initially uncertain if they were even bringing MC Tyrbach Valiant Trixie to the York Holstein show with their Sunybend Farm showstring.

But the big three-year-old Valiant daughter topped her class, and then snagged the grand champion honors for owner June Boyer and the family herd. Her win, along with several top placings by other Sunybend entries, helped earn the Boyer family both the show's Premier Breeder and Exhibitor honors.

Though June Boyer purchased the typey cow as a baby calf in a New York sale, Trixie's history traces to the herd of well-known Cumberland County breeder and judge Creedin Cornman. Cornman bred her dam, Justa-Beauty Trixie Twete, then sold part interest in her to Maple Farms, New Jersey, when she was just a heifer. Exhibited in the New Jersey state show, the dam had taken junior champion honors some years ago.

Scored VG-87 on her first classification, Trixie completed her first lactation well over 19,000 milk, and is projected to 23,000 in her present second lactation.

Board Encourages Land Preservation In Berks Co.

BY VAL VANTASSEL

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) —

Area farmers had a chance to explore how agricultural security areas, conservation easements and even restrictive agricultural zoning might benefit them at a recent open meeting of the Berks Co. Agricultural Land Preservation Board held at the Berks Ag. Center. "Our goal is planned preservation rather than planned obsolescence. We're looking for conspicuous preservation instead of conspicuous consumption," Berks County Commissioner Anthony Carabello explained neatly summing up the board's purpose.

"We hope farmers will work with the board. The way that land is getting chewed up here in Berks Co. we all have to work together to preserve it. I like to think of Berks Co. as a diamond in the rough. Many folks come in and take the best we have to offer then they leave and we're left with the problems they have created," Carabello stated.

The board was officially established in Feb. of this year to set up criteria for the buying of conservation easements better known as developmental rights in the county but they have been meeting in an unofficial capacity for nearly a year. William Hughes, a member of the state board, spoke to the approximately 60 farmers in the audience about the money that may be available and the minimum requirements set by the state for purchasing conservation easements.

"In Nov. of 1987 voters approved a $100 million dollar bond is-

Tobacco Disease Alert

JOHN O. YOCUM
Senior Research Associate
Agronomy Department

Tobacco blue mold disease has been found and confirmed in Lancaster County, Pa. The areas known to have blue mold are Ephrata, Intercourse, and Quarryville. This indicates the disease is probably spread throughout Lancaster County. All of the fields infected did not receive the preplant blue mold treatment, Ridomil.

Damage to the crop at this time is slight, but those growers that did not use Ridomil should protect their crop with one of the following methods.

If the tobacco can be cultivated, apply 1 quart of Ridomil and cultivate. Consult the layby treatment on the label for more use and direction information.

If the tobacco is too large to cultivate, the only material that has label clearance is mancozeb (Dithane M45, Manzate 200, etc). Mancozeb should be applied every 7 days at the rate of 1.5 to 2. pounds per acre until the blue mold threat is over. Mancozeb is a protectant so good plant coverage is important. For additional information, contact the Penn State Extension Service. Phone: (717) 394-6851.

Farmer Cooperatives Hold Leaders Conference

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A total of 44 Pennsylvania cooperators attended the 15th annual Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives (PAFC) Young Cooperative Leaders Conference held at the Trofrees Resort and Conference Center July 10-12.

Animal Health Commission Holds First Meeting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff said recently the Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission will play a vital role in helping Pennsylvania farmers protect the health of their livestock.

"The Department of Agriculture and the General Assembly will look to the commission for important policy guidelines and priorities needed to protect the investment and livelihood of our producers," Wolff said at the commission's first meeting.

"The commission will provide the expertise and stability needed to objectively analyze issues affecting animal health, which is so important to Pennsylvania's leading industry -- agriculture," Wolff said.

The commission was established by legislation that Gov. Casey signed into law last December, fulfilling a major campaign commitment to agriculture.

The 15-member commission is responsible for developing policy on all animal health, research, diagnostic and indemnity programs in the Commonwealth. The commission, headed by Wolff, includes state and local officials and legislators.

Other members are Health Secretary N. Mark Richards, Sen. Edward Helfrick, Sen. Patrick Stapleton, Rep. Samuel Morris and Rep. Kenneth Brandt, three veterinarians and six farmers appointed by Gov. Casey.

The governor's appointees are veterinarians John I. Enck Jr. of Carlisle, Robert E. Graybill of Lancaster, Sherbyn W. Ostrich of Robesonia, Berks County; and farmers Robert T. Gabel, R.D. 4, Newport, Perry County; Lynn Henninger, R.D. 1, Elizabethville, Dauphin County; Chris Kimmel, R.D. 1, Shelocia, Indiana County; C. Scott McNamara, R.D. 1, Meadville, Crawford County; Kent D. Strock, Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, and Dennis Wolff, R.D. 2, Millville, Columbia County.

Dairyman Opts For

BY PAT PURCELL

Poor air quality in the dairy barn may be of more concern than the temperature. At least Doug Cope thinks so. You'll find Pat Purcell's ventilation story on Page D-11.

Dan Martin's Perspective

BY LOU ANN GOOD

Will BST become part of the dairy man's future? Dan Martin has mixed feelings about the subject. See Lou Ann Good's story on Page B-12.

Acres Corn Update: Corn futures prices closed from 3/4 cent higher to 1/4 cent lower today after a fairly lackluster session. September settled slightly higher on buying attributed to an increase in near term exports with Mexico buying 120,000 metric tonnes. Further support was tied to news that Turkey and South Korea were in the market also along with firming basis levels. Ideas that the market had become oversold prompted some short covering with gains held in check by ideal growing conditions. September settled today at $2.29-1/2 after trading in a range from $2.28-1/2 to $2.31-3/4. Bids for generic certificates continued firm on strong buyer interest.

Acres Soybean Update: Soybean futures prices ended the day mixed with old crop higher on aggressive processing demand. New contract lows were made again today in the new crop months with November trading to a low of $5.95 on continued weather driven selling. New crop buying early in the day was in response to active European trading and oversold indicators. Rumors of strong cash basis levels fueled buying in the old crop options after talk that Decatur was paying November + $1.00 for spot deliveries. August settled 3/4 cent higher at $6.61-3/4 after trading in a range from $6.61 to $6.73.

Acres Wheat Update: Wheat futures prices staged a reversal today and closed higher from 2 to 6 cents. Buying early in the day was tied to short covering coupled with ideas that recent losses were overdone. September encountered strong technical resistance at $3.90 and settled 2 cents higher for the day at $3.88-1/4 after trading in a range from $3.86-1/2 to $3.90-3/4. December traded to a high of $4.03, where a double top was formed on the charts, and eased back down to $4.00-3/4 on the close. Trading throughout the day was sluggish with moves exaggerated by thin volume.

Acres Cattle Update: Live and feeder cattle futures closed mixed this afternoon with fats closing from 40 higher on the August and October options to 15 lower on the April while feeders dropped 15 points on the August and gained 30 on the October. Nearby months were propped by short covering and the establishment of Trucklot buying interest remained light and unaggressive and best where sellers adjusted prices to lower levels. Breast items were fully adequate to ample and in heaviest supply on whole breasts. Spot offers noted as low as $2.35 on cutlets and sales at $1.05 on line run breasts. Demand for legs and leg quarters slowed and offerings were at least adequate. Wings continued to trade at lower levels as sellers looked to clear ample stocks.

Northeast Chicken Parts

July 26, 1989

July 26, 1989

Demand for ready to cook whole fryers was fair. Supplies were fully adequate on 2 1/4-2 1/2 pound sizes, adequate on the heavier sizes. In the parts complex, supplies of cutlets and whole breasts were more than adequate for a sluggish demand, legs were adequate, leg quarters were in close balance, and wings were ample and being pushed to clear. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 59-70 cents. Live supplies were adequate with average weights in a desirable range. The slaughter schedules for today were moderately heavy. OPINION

Nagging Question

The U.S. Department of Commerce made its final ruling last week that Canadian pork product subsidies qualify to be addressed by a countervailing duty. The decision places a duty of 3.6 cents Canadian (approximately 3 cents U.S.) per pound on shipments of fresh, chilled and frozen pork as soon as today's decision can be published in the Federal Register. The new duty is up 0.1 cent from the preliminary Department of Commerce decision issued in May. The case now returns to the International Trade Commission (ITC) which is expected to make its final ruling in early September.

The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) and co-petitioners filed for the countervailing duty on subsidized Canadian fresh, chilled and frozen pork on January 5. The ITC made a preliminary ruling in favor of the U.S. in February. The Department of Commerce issued a preliminary decision in May, placing an original bond of 3.5 cents Canadian per pound of Canadian pork product shipped into the United States.

"We are pleased that we won this latest decision because it moves us closer toward having fair trade between the United States and Canada," said NPPC President Don Gingerich. "If we get a positive final decision from the International Trade Commission, U.S. pork producers can look forward to a more level playing field with Canada on trade. We are still concerned, however, that the duty be sufficiently high to do the job it's intended to do. We'll just have to wait and see."

U.S. pork producers receive no pork subsidies. Meanwhile, they compete against Canadian producers who are currently receiving an equivalent of $31 (U.S.) a hog in subsidies. A countervailing duty petition addresses unfair subsidies and not quotas, tariffs or trade barriers. Therefore, it does not conflict with the Free Trade Agreement signed in January between the United States and Canada. NPPC supports the Free Trade Agreement, according to Gingerich.

Because of trade inequities between the two countries, a countervailing duty was placed in 1985 on subsidized live Canadian hogs. An effort by NPPC to extend that duty to Canadian pork products was not successful at that time. U.S. pork producers expressed fears at the time that Canadians would attempt to bypass the duty on live hogs by processing the animals into pork products and then shipping the product into the U.S. duty free.

According to NPPC, that is what has occurred. Canadians have increased their exports of pork products to the United States by more than 52% since 1984. Last year, approximately 470 million pounds of Canadian pork was exported into the United States.

Glenn Grimes, University of Missouri agricultural economist, calculated that hog and pork imports cut U.S. pork producer revenues by as much as $3.37 per cwt. last year. Overall, the Canadian exports cost U.S. producers as much as $697 million in 1988.

We're pleased that the U.S. pork producers have won this round in the countervailing duty case on Canadian pork products imported into our country. But the nagging question remains. Why wasn't the loophole to bypass the duty on live hogs closed back in 1985?

NOW IS THE TIME

To Be Aware Of Blue Mold

This hot and humid weather is ideal conditions for virus infection on plants. And one bad infection that's rapidly spreading in the county is Blue Mold on tobacco. Tobacco is a $20 million cash crop to our farmers so we really need to be alert for it. Blue mold can be identified by a purplish mold growing on the underside of the leaf and can be observed early in the morning.

Control measures would depend on the age of the plants. For young tobacco plants, use 1 quart of Ridomil per acre and cultivate it in. For larger tobacco plants, use mancozeb 80WP at the rate of 1.5 to 2 pounds per acre. Mancozeb would include Dithane M45; Manzate 200 or Manex.

We are experiencing ideal conditions for the spread of Blue Mold. Let's do all we can to protect this $20 million crop.

To Attend Ag Progress Days

Most farmers do not need much prodding to visit an agricultural show whether it is in the county or halfway across the state.

Each year thousands of people have jammed Penn State University's Rock Springs Agricultural Research Center, nine miles west of Boalsburg on Route 45, to attend the Annual Ag Progress Days. The dates are August 15-17. Activities will start at 9:00 a.m. and end at 5:00 p.m. each day.

This year's theme, "Improving Your Life Through Education," celebrates 75 years of Cooperative Extension work in the United States. Bus tours to the research farms always have been a highlight of Ag Progress Days. A popular new addition last year — the special topics research tours — will return.

Machinery demonstrations, which had to be curtailed last year because of the drought, will return with a full schedule.

Take a day out of your busy schedule...you've earned it...and plan to attend Ag Progress Days. Parking and admission are free.

To Practice Farm Safety

I want to remind everyone, during this busy hot harvest season, that safety is very important at all times.

Reports show that human errors are responsible for about 85 percent or more of all farm accidents. Many accidents that are blamed on mechanical failures could have been prevented if someone had checked and repaired the equipment as the need arose. It is human to make mistakes but it can also be dangerous.

I'd like to offer some suggestions to help eliminate many of the problems associated with accidents:

 Give extra supervision to inexperienced operators.

 Permit only the operator on equipment while it is in use. Under no conditions should children or adults be permitted to ride along.

 Keep small children out of work areas unless accompanied by a responsible adult.

 Give teenagers work which they can handle safely.

 Avoid excessive fatigue — take a mid-morning and mid-afternoon break; it could be the most important time of your day.

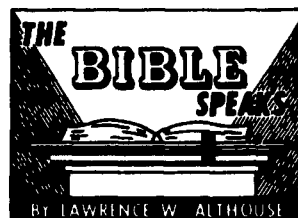

Let's be safety conscious and practice safety every day.

Be Aware of the Pollen Count

The "hay fever" season is here. Despite its name, "hay" is not normally the cause of hay fever. Ragweed is the chief cause. Ninety percent of all allergic reactions to grass and weed pollens are due to ragweed.

Hay fever is a seasonal disease. It's a disease that many people tend to minimize despite the fact that one out of every three sufferers develop its serious form — chronic asthma.

In Lancaster County it is widespread from early August through September when the weeds flower. The best way to destroy ragweed over large areas is by the use of a weed spray such as 2,4-D. Cutting the plant low, near the roots is recommended for small areas.

CHOOSING THE BRAMBLEBUSH

July 30, 1989

Background Scripture:

Judges 8:22 through 9:57.

Devotional Reading:

Ezekiel 28: 1-10.

The story of Abimelech and Jotham is not so obscure as it may seem. Gideon, the successful general, is offered the first kingship of Israel, but refuses, not only for himself but for his 70 legitimate sons as well. Why did he do this? Inasmuch as God had clearly indicated his choice of Gideon as leader of Israel's army, wasn't he the logical choice?

Rightly or wrongly, Gideon refused, ostensibly because the idea of a kingship he regarded as a Canaanite practice: "I will not rule over you, and my son will not rule over you; the Lord will rule over you" (8:23). This point of view is reflected at various other places in the early Old Testament narrative. We call it a theocracy: rule directly by God. Gideon obviously believed that if he were to become king, he would be interfering with the rule of God. Is that what God wanted, or was Gideon just being too cautious again?

PLAYING THE HARLOT

The next part of the story is very obscure. As an alternative to accepting the kingship, Gideon asked the people to give him a portion of their booty from the fighting and he used these gifts to make an ephod. No one today knows just what an ephod was, but it is suspected that it was some kind of graven image, for the writer of Judges indicates that "it became a snare to Gideon and to his family" and even the rest of Israel "played the harlot after it there." It is hard to believe that Gideon would have followed his great accomplishments with disloyalty to God, but, of course, with human nature, anything is possible.

Even though he refused to be their king, it appears that Gideon continued to give some leadership until his death. Because of him, the people reminded relatively faithful to God so long as Gideon lived. Once he died, however, "the people of Israel turned again and played the harlot and the Baals..." (8:33). Not only did they forget their covenant with God, but the people of Israel forgo the debt of gratitude they owed to Gideon and his family.

THE WRONG REASONS

Gideon had 70 legitimate sons, but he also had a son, Abimelech, by his concubine, who was probably not an Israelite, but a Canaanite. Gideon's family turned down the kingship, but Abimelech sought it aggressively and shrewdly. He is a master at selling himself. They wanted a king and he is willing to be their king. They wanted someone from the house of Gideon and he was Gideon's bastard son. Yet, he was also one of them, a Canaanite, so that they said, "He is our brother" (9:3b). And, in all probability, he shared their religion, named as he was: "son of Melech," one of the Canaanite gods. So, for all the wrong reasons, they rallied to Abimelech to make him king — just as some of us still choose our leaders today.

Jotham, upon learning of Abimelech's murder of his 70 brothers, climbs atop Mt. Gerizim and tells his listeners the fable of the trees and the bramblebush. Because the trees and the vine were "too busy" with their own affairs to serve as king, they ended up with the bramblebush, whose only qualification was that he wanted to be king.

Jotham is obviously referring to Israel and Abimelech and pronounces a curse upon them. But he need not have done that, for when we choose the bramblebush to lead us, that is curse enough.

FARM MANAGEMENT

Recruiting Farm Labor

BY RUSSEL D. POWELL
Multi-County Business/Management Agent

The process of recruiting farm labor should follow the preparation of a job description, which we discussed last week. Recruiting is becoming more difficult and time consuming as many farmers are finding fewer qualified people that are available and willing to work. Recruitment is simply the process of searching for qualified applicants for the job and getting them interested enough to apply.

The main purpose of the recruiting process should be to generate a pool of qualified candidates from which you can choose the best for your job. It is important to note that there is a difference between generating a pool of "warm bodies" and attracting qualified job applicants. One of the best ways to attract qualified applicants is to be specific about the qualities you want. If you are unsure about exactly what you are looking for in an employee, take time to think about what the job entails and what skills are required and then outline the position and requirements in a written job description.

There are numerous methods of recruiting job applicants. Let's take a look at some of the more common methods of attracting good farm help and discuss the value of each in your recruiting program.

Suggestions from Current Employees

Current employees can be an excellent source of contacts for new workers because they know people in the community and have at least some idea of your labor needs. They also have a stake in the process since they are likely to be working with the person they have suggested, if the person is hired. However, this approach should be used with caution because there could be friction between you and the employees making the recommendation if the new employee does not work out. This points out the need for a business-like relationship with all employees and continual monitoring and appraising of employee performance.

Word of Mouth

This technique is commonly used with good success. Friends, neighbors, salespeople, veterinarians, and others who come in contact with many people can send applicants your way if they know you are looking.

Want Ads

Want ads in newspapers and agricultural magazines have several advantages. They are a quick, relatively inexpensive and easy way to reach a potentially large audience. The most common complaint about want ads is that you get many applicants, but none that you want to hire. However, a clearly written and specific ad may solve this problem. Compare the following ads and consider the applicants they might attract.

Wanted: Worker for dairy farm.
Call 555-5555

OR

Farm Employees for 100-cow dairy farm. Responsibilities include milking, feeding, and some machinery operation during peak crop periods. Competitive wages, health insurance, one week paid vacation, and one day off each week. Write Box 111 Anytown, PA.

Government Job Services

State Employment Job Service offices, located in each county are often overlooked by agricultural employers. You can call the Job Service and talk with a counselor, who will write-up the vacancy announcement and post it in the office (without the employer's name). Counselors screen applicants and only refer qualified applicants to you.

Bulletin Boards

Posting a vacancy announcement in areas where farmers and potential farm workers frequent, such as farm credit offices, farm supply stores, grange buildings, or even college placement offices is an inexpensive and effective method of "spreading the word." The following information should be included in the job announcement.

- Title of the job;
- Description of responsibilities;
- Description of skills required;
- Description of working conditions;
- Key components of the wage/benefit package;
- How to apply.

It may be helpful to distribute the written announcements to key salespeople and others who are spreading word of the vacancy. This will help insure that "the word" is accurate.

Employment Agencies

Many private agencies make it a business of finding employees for prospective employers. Although most are located in the Midwest, their ads can usually be found in popular agricultural magazines. These firms represent another legitimate source of qualified employees, but they tend to be expensive - typically charging employers a commission of 10 to 30% of the new employee's annual salary.

In today's job environment, aggressive marketing of your jobs is important and will be rewarded if done carefully. One thing is certain: effective recruiting in a competitive job market requires time, effort, and patience.

Leaders Conference

program was to further educate the conference attendees about the importance of the cooperative way of doing business. Farmers and farm-related businesses organized the first cooperatives over a century ago in order to do business as a group. Even though many of the original agricultural cooperatives have changed or merged, cooperatives remain one of the most important means for farmers to survive in today's competitive environment.

Speakers and topics at the conference included William Perry from Milk Marketing Inc., who talked about cooperative basics; Dr. Robert Milligan from Cornell University discussed the importance of proper management with the group; Chris Peterson, a Cornell graduate student and professor from Juniata College, gave a presentation on interpreting financial statements of cooperatives; and Dr. David Thomas, president and CEO of the American Institute of Cooperation, discussed the current challenges facing cooperatives.

The Young Cooperative Leaders Conference also has a leadership development aspect to it as attendees from the previous year's conference help to plan and carry out the current year's program. Those leaders that assisted with the 1989 conference included: Jan and Laureen Naylor, Factoryville, conference chair couple; Jordan and Carole Hoover, Gap, Southeastern Region leader couple; James and Linda Compton, Clarksburg, Western Region leader couple; Charles and Becky Castle, Canton, Northern Region leader couple; and Stan and Janice Burkholder, Chambersburg, South Central Region leader couple. The Hoovers were selected to serve as the 1990 Young Cooperative Leaders Conference chair couple.

The conference participants and their cooperative sponsors are as follows. From the southeast region of the state -- Clifford and Joyce Blank, Gap, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative; Scott and Kathy Brinton, Peach Bottom, Agway Inc.; Lester and Ruth Ann Gehman, Ephrata, the Lancaster PAFC Council; Terry and Kim Hix, Mohrsville, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative; Larry and Beverly Kehl, Fleetwood, Keystone Farm Credit; Jay and Lucille Kopp, Mt. Joy, Keystone Farm Credit; Keith and Marie Lutz, Sinking Spring, Keystone Farm Credit; and Robert and Beth Ranck, Paradise, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

From the western region -- Larry and Michele Hoffman, Cochran, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative; Kevin and Colleen Osborn, Waterford, Meadville Farm Credit; William Michael and Emily Schultz, North East, National Grape Producers Cooperative; Tim and Annette Tobin, Edinboro, Milk Marketing Inc.; and Michael and Carol Walker, Meyersdale, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

From the northern region -- Jim Barnes, Lawrenceville, Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative; Barry and Michele Woodruff and Felicia Woodruff, all from Danville, DairyLea.

From the south central region -- Steven and Linda Hoke, Mechanicsburg, the Cumberland-Perry PAFC Council; and Elam and Diana Meyers, St. Thomas, York Farm Credit.

The participants selected as leader couples for the 1990 Young Cooperative Leaders Conference were: Clifford and Joyce Blank, Tim and Annette Tobin, Elam and Diana Meyers, and Jim Barnes.

Utilize Low-Cost, Low-Quality Grains For Hog Producers

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.)—Any factor that can damage grain or stress the plant can have a detrimental effect on grain quality. For example, during the summer of 1988, which happened to be an extremely dry year, many laboratories observed an increase in the incidence of mycotoxin contamination. Most of the mycotoxin problems were due to aflatoxin, a mycotoxin produced by a mold that thrives in hot dry climates. But excessively wet weather, especially near harvest time, can also lead to mold growth and the production of other mycotoxins. Ken Kephart, Penn State Extension Swine Specialist, offers the following brief summary of problems that swine producers may encounter with grains that have been damaged, diseased or subjected to mold growth.

LOW TEST-WEIGHT GRAINS

A potential result of dry growing conditions is a low test weight (low bushel weight) for grain. While low test-weight grains often have normal or higher protein contents, they're usually lower in energy. When feeding low-test grains, studies at Kansas State University and the University of Kentucky show that growth rate is not affected, but pigs have to consume more feed, so feed efficiency drops (usually five to seven percent).

It's also possible that drought stress may have no effect on test-weight or hog performance, even though the effects on corn crop yield are dramatic, studies at the University of Kentucky show. Two drought stressed varieties of corn there following the drought of '83 had normal bushel weights and higher than normal protein. The drought-stressed corn supported performance that was slightly superior to that of normal corn.

When feeding suspect grains, check bushel weights and protein contents. If these two values are normal, hog performance should not change.

SPROUTED GRAINS

The protein level in sprouted grains is usually similar to that of undamaged grains. But the energy content and bushel weights are usually less, which should depress feed efficiency. However, researchers from Canada feeding sprouted (seven to 19 percent) and frost-damaged (75 percent) barley to pigs found that growth rate and feed conversion were normal. Reports from the University of Missouri and Texas Tech University show that sprouted milo (17 to 28 percent) had no detrimental effect on performance.

None of the experiments reported above had mold problems in their sprouted grains. But producers should be aware that sprouted grains can be moldy.

MOLDS AND MYCOTOXINS
Warm and wet conditions can lead to fusarium molds (also called scab in small grains) which produce zearalenone, vomitoxin and T-2. This type of mold can also occur when grains are neglected or abused during storage. With a lengthy storage time, there's often more opportunity for insect growth, bin condensation, and damaged kernels (from shuffling corn from one location to another).

Aspergillus, a type of mold that thrives in hot dry weather, is the one that produces aflatoxin. Moisture levels of 18 to 20 percent in corn are ideal for Aspergillus growth. Normally, aflatoxin is most prevalent in the Southeast but was more widespread following the 1988 growing season.

Still another mold that can be especially troublesome in small grains is Claviceps. This type of mold produces ergot and is found most often in rye, but is common in the other small grains during periods of excessive rainfall. Ergot is characterized by abnormally small kernels.

Corn smut, like Aspergillus, is more common during dry weather and temperatures between 80 and 85 degrees F. Smut occurs most often when the corn plant is subjected to insect injury, or if the corn variety has exposed ear tips.

Some grains that would be considered unacceptable to the flour industry may be a bargain for the hog producer. But others that look and smell fine could spell disaster. Here are some rough guidelines.

Sprouted grains. If you can be certain that no molds are present (and that's a big if), hog performance on the sprouted grains should be similar to that of normal grain. For the buyer, a 25 to 30 percent deduction from the standard bushel price would be reasonable. If mold is present, the grain may be worth nothing for hog production.

Low test-weight grains. These grains will depress feed conversion. Again, if you're buying, a discount of 25 to 30 percent should be fair. Be sure, especially with small grains, that the low-test weight is not due to mold.

Scab- and ergot-contaminated grains. Avoid them if possible. If there is no alternative, feed these grains only to the grower and finisher pigs. Incorporate into the formula at a rate of 250 pounds per ton, and increase gradually only if hogs are eating and growing well. Any grain known to contain a harmful level of mycotoxins should be discounted by at least 50 percent.

Hot and dry weather, and warm and wet weather can lead to mold growth in grains. If test weights and protein levels from grains grown under these conditions are normal, then the grain may be okay. If a chemical test shows the grains are negative for mycotoxins, then it's even a safer bet that the grain is usable. But you can never be sure until you feed it. If you see any of the following symptoms in your pigs, be suspicious of mycotoxin poisoning.

- Feed refusal.
- Swollen vulvas.
- Prolapsed rectums.
- Convulsions.
- Death.
- General reduction in performance.

Maryland Gov. Schaefer Announces $960,000 For Farm Preservation

FOR FARM LAND PRESERVATION

ANNAPOLIS, MD — Governor William Donald Schaefer has announced Board of Public Works approval of $960,000 for Maryland's agricultural preservation easements in four parcels of land totaling more than 969 acres in Queen Anne's County.

Chaired by the governor, the Board of Public Works also is comprised of Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein and Treasurer Lucille Maurer. The board is authorized by the General Assembly to approve major consultant and construction contracts, equipment purchases, property transactions, and other procurement actions.

"The purchase of this land is part of Maryland's continuing commitment to preserve agricultural land," Governor Schaefer said.

The Maryland Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation was created in 1977 to preserve agricultural land and woodland in order to provide sources of agriculture products within the state for its citizens, to control urban expansion and provide open space land.

Entry into the program requires the establishment of agricultural preservation districts. Landowners sign a voluntary district agreement which restricts the use of their land to agriculture. Once in a district a landowner may apply to sell a permanent development rights easement to the foundation.

To date, Maryland has recorded 1,195 agricultural preservation districts totaling in excess of 170,000 acres. The state has secured perpetual easements on more than 78,000 of these acres, the highest amount of protected agricultural acreage in any state.

The state has secured perpetual easements on more than 78,000 of these acres, the highest amount of protected agricultural acreage in any state. Purchases in Queen Anne's County are to be made from:

Lawrence E. Ewing Jr. and Muriel E. Ewing - 359.33 acres.

Herbert A. Willis and Chestertown Bank of Maryland - 226 acres.

Jabez F. and Betty A. Brown - 167 acres.

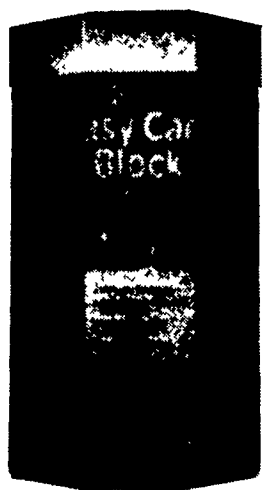

Mary C. Whitby - 216.763 acres.

Competition Heats Up At Berks 4-H Round-Up

BY VAL VANTASSEL
Berks Co. Correspondent

READING, (Berks Co.) — The favorite topic of conversation at the Berks Co. 4-H Dairy Round Up Monday and Tuesday was the heat. Temperatures climbed into the humid 90's early both days making showmen reluctant to don their whites any sooner than necessary and quick to remove them when their share of the event was through. Cattle too were stressed, not only by heat and humidity but also the Reading Fairgrounds chlorinated water which didn't suit some of the more discriminating animals.

Conditions were tough for exhibitors and cattle alike giving parents and leaders a good reason to keep close track of the action on the ring. Happily no intervention was necessary and exhibitors were able to manage their well mannered if slightly balky animals in the sweltering ring. It spoke well of the advance preparation and loving care that showmen had given their cattle.

It made Lisa Francisco's job a good deal more difficult. Francisco had the unenviable task of choosing between excellent showmen and outstanding fitters. A graduate of Penn State and former New Jersey Dairy Princess, Francisco took plenty of time picking her winners and in several of the age categories stated that there was only a hair's breath of a difference between the first and second place entries. In the 16 and over showmanship class, exhibitors were not only required to lead their own animals but twice had to switch with other showman. On this basis Francisco selected Scott Youse as the top senior showman. "To be a good showman you also have to be a good judge. I picked out an animal with an obvious problem to correct and gave several showman an opportunity to make her look her best. Only the first place exhibitor did so," Francisco said explaining Scott's placing.

Francisco stuck with Scott as her grand champion followed closely by Duane Stump, the second place 16 & over showman as the reserve. However she also recognized the fine ring work of Erica Davis and Lynette Heffner, the first and second place entries in the 8 and 9-year-old class. Speaking of Erica, she stated "When that young lady entered the ring with that large cow I was sure there was going to be trouble. However within two minutes she had the animal behaving like a lady. Both of these girls are to be commended. If they continue at the rate they are going they will be super showmen."

Randy Balthaser's (right) 4-year-old, Heidi, squeaked by brother Jason's animal, Frosty, to receive the grand championship of the Brown Swiss show in Berks County. Frosty was also named best bred and owned.

For the first time, fitters 14 and over were required to fit their animals totally on their own. Randy Balthaser, an avid showman, in the 14 and 15-year age group won a fitting competition for the first time, with a "super clip job" on a Brown Swiss. Heidi Schlegel took the 16 and over honors closely followed by Scott Youse. But when it came to the grand championship, Francisco was instructed to judge heavily on the one thing everyone could be responsible for... cleanliness. And when it was all said and done two younger members, Leslie Nirschl and Lynette Heffner, walked away with the honors. Both Leslie and Lynette stated they had cleaned their own animals. Leslie's dad added that Leslie also clipped much of the animal herself getting a little help around the head.

In the type competition Berks 4-H'ers evidently prefer black and white with 77 of the 116 entries being Holsteins. While there were a number of fine animals in the ring, Terry Raun, the type judge, narrowed his selection to two animals that have spent lots of time in by Stacey Geist.

In Brown Swiss competition the Balthaser brothers, Randy and Jason, received grand and reserve honors respectively. Quiet Valley Classic Heidi received her top finish based on the quality of her udder with Jason's entry, Northkill Creek Bridge Frosty, sired by Bridge View Jubilation, receiving the best owned and bred honors. Randy also had the Junior Champion, Northkill Creek Custom Hazel, an intermediate calf.

In the Jersey, Guernsey and Ayrshire competitions, Raun chose relatively young animals. In the Ayrshire group Sam Seidel's Heindel Johnny Shemrock, and Jed Vail's Karlyn R. Command's Keeley were the grand and reserve champions of the breed even though they were both junior calf entries. Both exhibited the clean angular look Raun favored and they lacked senior level competition.

In the Guernsey breed there were older entries but Raun chose potential over proven performance by naming Daniel Hollenbach's intermediate calf, Lebanon Valley Boris Tina as the Grand Champion + Heidi Schlegel's summer yearling, R-Lost Creek Victory Sundance as the reserve champion. Sundance, a Bettswards Telestars Victory daughter was also named as best owned and bred.

Irish Creek GG Mary, a senior two-year-old owned by Amy Phillips was named the grand champ-the winner's circle, Daview Pete Ginger, owned by Jeffrey Davis and Linden-Loch Sexation Rena-Twin owned by Scott Youse. Ginger, a three year old out of Straight Pine Elevation Pete had a definite advantage over Rena, an aged cow who happened to be dry for this competition. Still choosing between Ginger, a junior champion at the all American 2 years ago and Rena, a youth division champion at a number of local events, couldn't have been easy. Raun went with Ginger based on her udder condition but conceded he might have switched the pair if Rena had been in milk. There is definitely an interesting confrontation shaping up between Ginger and Rena, an Ocean View Sexation daughter, but spectators will have to wait at least one more show season as Rena isn't due to freshen until Nov. Davis also received the Outstanding Breeder award with his grand champion entry.

For Holstein Junior Champions Raun went with two clean cut angular animals, senior calf, Oakenbound-W Beauty Blanch E.T., owned by Jeremy Troutman and reserve, an intermediate yearling, Ro-Ru Melvin Noel, owned ion followed by David Nirschl Jr. Merrivale Legend Raisin, a jr. two-year-old. Tammy Epting a first time showman, had the junior champion, an intermediate calf named Phil-J Nibit Royal Nugget. Laura Phillips followed with reserve junior champion Irish Creek Opportunity Rebecca. Irish Creed Squire Pepper, daughter of Squire, was named best owned and bred. Pepper belongs to Amy Phillips.

CCC Butter Inventories At 5-Year High

By Blair Smith
And Robt. Yonkers, PSU
BUTTERFAT

"The natural fat of milk." This definition of butterfat by Webster sounds innocuous enough, but oh what a dilemma this "natural" substance presents to the dairy industry! It wasn't too long ago that non-fat dry milk powder was in chronic surplus, now it is butter that the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) is having trouble getting rid of. Cheese and powder stocks are virtually non-existent, but uncommitted CCC inventories of butter are at a five-year high. And growing.

Changes In Consumption

The primary reason butterfat is in surplus is because consumers want less of it in most of the milk and dairy products they buy, at the prices they must pay for the higher fat items. Of course, it is not just price but a growing concern about the overall levels of all fat, of saturated fat, and of cholesterol in our diet that persuades us to reduce our consumption of butterfat. Sales of American and Italian cheeses have provided the major undergirding for the butterfat market, but recent data suggest a slow-down in the growth in per capita sales of such products. In fact, preliminary estimates for 1988 actually show a decline in cheese consumption on a per capita basis.

CCC Purchase Prices Change Again

The increase in the support price beginning on April 1, and the subsequent return to earlier levels on July 1 (from $10.60 to $11.10 to $10.60) resulted in essentially no net change in cheese purchase prices. Powder prices, however, are up about 8.6 percent from 72.75 to 79.00 cents per pound), and butter prices are down about 8.7 percent (from $1.32 to $1.205 per pound). The purpose of these changes, presumably, is to lower prices of butter relative to powder so that less butterfat is produced and/or more butterfat is consumed in the commercial market.

Will It Work?

It seems unlikely much less butterfat will be produced in the near-term future. The conversion from high- to low-fat dairy breeds is about over, and butterfat premiums are still much more important determinants of milk prices than solids-not-fat or protein premiums throughout the United States as a whole. Changing the production ratio of the solids-not-fat to butterfat components of milk is a slow and uncertain process, and it will take years before the results of such efforts are likely to show up in the farm milk tank.

The overall direction of the effect of lower butterfat prices relative to powder prices will be to encourage the consumption of higher butterfat and discourage the consumption of higher solids-not-fat products — a reversal of the trends actually under way in the market. Swimming against the tide always makes change more difficult.

So, will the price change work? To some extent, yes. Less butter will be offered to the CCC. Butter purchases, stocks, and uncommitted inventories should all fall as a result of lower purchase prices. The short-term goal of reducing CCC costs will be aided. The longer-term industry problem of what to do with the declining demand for butterfat will remain unresolved. This problem clearly begs of a longer-term solution than some minor adjustments in relative prices.

Dairy Champions Named In York Co.

Taking the Reserve Champion honor was Kilkaro Paulette Chairman, exhibited by Gary and Gail Thoman's Gar-Will Farm.

The winning five-year-old is scored EX-92, and projected to complete her fourth lactation with over 26,000 milk. She is sired by Board Chairman and was bred by Verne and Pauline Bowen, Tioga County.

Selected the best Senior Female Bred and Owned by Judge Terry Rawn was the second placed five-year-old exhibited by Frank and Sandy Feeser's Furnace Creek Farm, Hanover.

Furnace Creek Sexation Trudy is by Ocean-View Sexation. Classified VG-85 on show day, she was re-scored two days later with the Furnace Creek herd and raised to EX-90.

Junior Champion honors went to a stylish intermediate calf exhibited by Coredale Farms, the Rodman Thompson family, East Berlin. Coredale Steady Jodee, by Tri-Town Steady Spipper, was cited as the "best package" in the junior class runoffs, and singled out as Best Junior Female Bred and Owned.

Though numbers were down somewhat from prior York Holstein shows, judge Rawn, of Chambersburg, praised the overall quality of the cattle presented.

Faced by the most baffling class of the day, however, sire analyst with Landmark Genetics, Terry Rawn, chose not to declare a winner at all. The popular, crowd-pleasing Kiddie Klass brought more than a half dozen youngsters aged three and over into the ring with tame, well-behaved calves. Participants won ribbons, tee-shirts and plenty of applause from families and friends on the sidelines.

Evergreen Tractor Demonstrates Bob Cat Line

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.)—Farmers got a demonstration of Bobcat skid steer loaders and the Lebanon Fair Grounds got an entrance light and electric power to the pavilion. This all happened this week because Evergreen Tractor Co., Inc., Lebanon, held an "Open House" to demonstrate an assortment of machines.

Evergreen became the Melroe-Bob-Cat dealer last December.

And while the demonstration of Bob Cat equipment was in progress, the backhoe attachment was used to dig a trench for the power lines to be placed underground for the fair association.

"We just thought we might as well make good use of our time and energy," said Dennis Grumbine, Evergreen president. "This demonstration gives us a chance to do something for the fair grounds while we're here. Grumbine said the attendance was good at the two-day showing. And he said that almost any model of the Bob Cat line was of interest to farmers. Some farmers even use their skid loaders to do some contracting work on the side. But most loaders are bought with the size of the barn door in mind. This is especially true in this area where the bank barns have narrow stable doors.

Supreme champion of the York County 4-H Dairy Roundup was Bridgette Boyer's Holstein breed winner. A revolving trophy was presented by American Breeders Service, represented by Ira Boyer, and a plaque donated by Whispering Hollow Farm.

Land Preservation In Berks Co.

sue for farmland preservation. The state will appropriate $20 million for the purchase of conservation easements this year. The first $10 million will be based on the real estate transfer taxes of Berks County as a percentage of those collected in the state. Berks Co. will receive $449,000 of this first $10 million. The second $10 million will be funded on a matching basis with county funding. Counties such as Berks which produce more than 2 percent of the total agricultural production in the state will be matched up to an 8 to 1 ratio. Those producing less will be funded to a 4 to 1 ratio. We expect to use the full state allocation in the first few years of the program," Hughes explained.

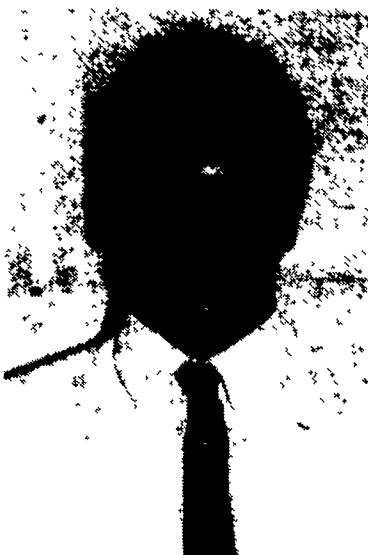

While the county board is still working on a set of standards for the county program, there are minimum criteria for applications established by the state board according to Hughes. "In order to purchase a conservation easement the farmland must be in an ag. security area. It must be capable of generating gross receipts greater than $25,000. It also must contain 50% of the land area identified as land classifications I through IV. It must contain 50% harvestable cropland, which means we won't be purchasing all mountainsides or wood lots although they may make up a portion of the purchase. The cropland also has to be capable of producing yields equal to the county average," Hughes explained.

After Hughes' short presentation Clyde Myers, Berks Co. Cooperative Extension Agent, gave several members of the audience an unpleasant surprise. "You heard Bill explain that all conservation easement purchases must be in validated ag. security areas. To be validated all ag. security areas must be registered with the recorder of deeds. While we don't understand why yet, we know of 11 ag. security areas that have been passed by the township supervisors but have not been registered with the recorder of deeds. As far as we know and as of this meeting the only valid ag. security areas are Oley-Earl, Richmond, Colebrookdale, Jefferson, Penn and Maxatawny Townships. These total approximately 22,500 acres that are eligible to take part in the conservation easements program.

"Douglas, Hereford, Maiden-creek, Perry, Windsor, Greenwich, Heidelberg, Tulpehocken, Bethel, Upper Bern and Washington Townships are through the township supervisors but have not been registered. These include over 45,000 acres of land which won't be eligible for the program unless steps are taken to get them recorded. We hope to have 25 townships with validated ag. security areas by Sept. to take part in the program," Myers explained. (Since the meeting Washington Township has been registered with the recorder of deeds and Upper Tulpehocken Township has been passed by the township supervisors. It may be registered by the time this is published.)

One of the problems may be the misunderstandings surrounding the ag. security areas. "Just because you enter an ag. security area doesn't mean that you have to sell your conservation easements. There are several cases of farmers entering part of their farms into the ag. security areas while leaving part out which makes mapping the areas difficult. I don't know why they are doing this. Unlike the conservation easement program, compliance in ag. security areas is voluntary. Regardless of whether it is good or not, ag. security areas don't tie your hands in any way.

Bernard Riley

The Berks County Ag. Land Preservation Board is working to save farmland. Among the members and speakers featured at a recent open meeting are left to right, Robert Ludgate, County Commissioner Anthony Carabello, Vicki Kintzer, and Warren Lamm. Back row — Dwight Stoltzfus, Bernard Riley, Sheila Miller and Ernie Miller. Missing from the board are Fred Eyrich, George Moyer and Dr. Robert Ziegenfus.

"In fact they have a couple of real advantages for farmers. They offer you a better stance in the case of eminent domain. They also prevent townships from passing ordinances that restrict normal farming practices such as the height of buildings. If you're not in an ag. security district we strongly encourage you organize one," Myers stressed.

Myers offered good news for agriculturalists near an existing ag. security area. "You no longer have to wait the seven years for the area's review before joining an existing ag. security area. A new act, 149, allows farmers with a minimum of 10 acres to sign up in an existing ag. security area. You will have to go through all the procedures of setting up a security area so interested landowners may want to get together and do several additions at one time," Myers said.

Myers introduced Bernard Riley, who was hired May 31, to serve as the Berks Co. Land Preservation Specialist. Riley, a 1989 graduate of Kutztown University in Geography, is being paid by the county to conduct the conservation easements programs. One of his concerns at present is the problem of getting ag. security areas recorded. He has contacted the recorder of deeds and had these words of wisdom. "While we can't give out the specifics in each township often the omissions are easy to correct. First all the landowners must sign their first and last names. As we understand it in some cases involving husbands and wives only one spouse has signed and both must. Second the volume and page of deed reference must be included for each owner. It must be signed by the township supervisors and include the township seal. It must be acknowledged by the owners, both husband and wife, before a notary and a map must accompany it. It must clearly show the ag. security area. Zoning maps seem to work well and hand drawn maps by the farmers aren't acceptable. Farmers want to get their ag. security areas to the recorder of deeds as soon as possible after they are passed by the township," Riley explained.

According to Riley, monetary commitments must be into the state board by Aug. 1 and the board hopes to have their ranking system ready to submit later in the month. When the system is approved there will be a three-step process for conservation easements applications. "We will initially screen them to see that they meet the minimum state requirements Bill spoke of. They then will go through the counties numerical ranking system. If they score high enough they will be appraised by an independent appraiser then we will negotiate an easement and draw up a sample deed."

Warren Lamm, a member of the county board, announced that in Berks conservation easements will not be sold for 25-year periods. "We will only be selling easements in perpetuity. People have asked me what we mean by perpetuity. To me it means forever plus one day. We also are looking for large blocks of land and may be willing to give extra points for larger farms."

The local board is still working on its numerical rating system which at the time of the meeting include 19 different factors. The one thing the board would say was that it will include a Farmland Evaluation and Site Assessment (FLESA). It will give credit for good stewardship such as conservation practices including but not limited to soil erosion and sedimentation control and nutrient management.

The farm's location, the developmental pressures in the area, and productivity will all be taken into consideration. The zoning of the farm could make a difference. "Farms zoned in an agriculturally restricted area will get a higher rating than those without restrictive zoning. The only townships that I am aware of right now with restrictive zoning are Richmond, Perry, Heidelberg, N. Heidelberg, Marion and Exeter," Clyde Myers said.

Applicants can expect a fair consideration of their application as well. "The applications will be identified by number so they can be evaluated without anyone knowing whose farm it is," Lamm added.

The board also asked for input from the audience on negotiating the price of conservation easements. "Easement prices are determined by the difference between the appraised value of the land for farming and the price for development. If there is a question on the appraised values farmers will be able to hire their own appraisers," Lamm explained.

"We would like to buy as many easements as possible for our money. Therefore we like to negotiate the price for the easements. Some counties have even put caps on the amount they are willing to pay for each acre," Myers stated.

Audience reaction was favorable to the idea and one farmer even volunteered to give his rights to the county.

Board members and speakers fielded a number of questions mostly on the status of certain ag. security areas in the county but no one felt well enough versed to discuss the issue of taxes on conservation easements. It's an area that still is being explored according to Mary Goodhouse, the land preservation staff person with the State Dept. of Ag.

"We believe that it will be taxed as though you will be selling a portion of real estate. In Pa. there is a 2% transfer tax which normally the buyer pays 1% and the seller pays 1%. The attorneys still aren't sure whether farmers will pay 1% and the state nothing or whether farmers will be expected to pay 2%. They are guessing the farmers will pay the full amount."

"The rest is capital gains and after the 1986 tax reform it basically is taxed the same as income except we believe 10% will be exempt. So it really depends on your tax bracket."

"There are some exceptions. The most notable is if you have only had the farm for 2 or three years. In that case there won't be much tax because the tax is subject to a basis. As I understand it if you have recently bought a farm for $200,000 and you sell your developmental rights for $100,000 you probably won't pay much in taxes."

"Most of my experience is in Connecticut and there established farmers who had their operations for some time were paying between 25% to 33% in taxes on their developmental rights. These figures are just things to consider. Before farmers do anything they should consult a tax attorney," Goodhouse explained.

While there isn't any material specifically developed yet on the conservation easement programs in the tax area, Goodhouse said there were a number of land conservancy groups that may be able to offer more specific information. She hopes to publish some material in the near future with the Pa. Farmers Association.

Drawing on her experiences in Connecticut Goodhouse stressed that few people sell their developmental rights strictly for monetary reasons. "Most farmers felt that the land had been good to them and their families. They wanted to give something back and this was their way of doing so."

The importance of preserving agricultural lands in this area can't be understated. "60% of the state's ag. production is south and east of the Blue Mountains. In fact this area includes three of the top producing areas in the nation, Lancaster Chester and Berks. Conservation Easements are a nice start to preserving that land but it's only a start. It won't save all the land that needs to be preserved in Berks. We really need to consider restrictive ag. zoning," Myers said.

Avoid Show Season Diseases

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Show season is now here. The pleasure of a successful show season can quickly end if disease problems are brought home with show animals and spread to the rest of your herd or flock. By following these simple guidelines, recommended by Dr. Larry Hutchinson, Penn State Extension Veterinarian, your show season can remain a bright spot in your summer:

Show only healthy animals which have been properly vaccinated. Have your veterinarian examine animals prior to transporting them to the show grounds.

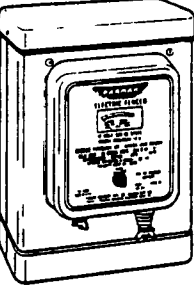

Remember, a health certificate may be required by fair officials, but doesn't guarantee a completely disease-free animal. While at the fair, don't share feed tubs or other equipment with other exhibitors. Watch for signs of disease, such as coughing, diarrhea, decreased appetite, or lameness. Keep your animals comfortable and prevent stress from such factors as high temperatures.

After returning home, keep show animals away from the main herd or flock for a period of two weeks or more. A separate holding pen is recommended. Continue to watch all animals closely for signs of disease.

RCMA Pays May Milk Premium To Members

BATAVIA, N.Y. — The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA) is paying cash premiums to its dairy farmer members for their milk sold in May. The RCMA May premium is 24¢ per hundred pounds (cwt.), or 2.1¢ per gallon, in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania; and 30¢ per cwt., or 2.6¢ per gallon, in the New England states. The higher premium being paid in New England is the result of higher RCMA membership sign-up there and increasing shortage of total milk production.

With this twenty-first premium payment to its members, RCMA is showing its doubters and adversaries that it has been, and will continue to be, successful in attaining its goal of financially assisting the Northeast dairy farmers and the industry as a whole by paying out SIXTY-SIX MILLION DOLLARS since September 1987. RCMA has built a strong organization that has a net worth of nearly one million dollars to continue its efforts.

RCMA Executive Director and General Manager, Ed Anna, says, "RCMA has been established in the Northeast dairy industry to help sustain and nurture that very industry." He continues to say that RCMA will continue to help the industry, but only if its members are willing to carry part of the load.

According to Bill Zuber, Western New York dairy farmer and RCMA President, in addition to the RCMA's active members and those who work for RCMA "behind the scenes," RCMA is fortunate to have public leaders, including 96 farmer-elected Directors, 86 Delegates and 60 County Coordinators, who keep RCMA going. "But remember," Zuber says, "they can't do it alone. We need the people behind the scenes, too — those 'quiet masses' are the ones who will really make the difference in the strength of RCMA," he states. "As RCMA members, we can't just sign the agreement and leave it at that," Zuber explains. "We all have to contribute to our organization to make it work."

"Let's speak up now while we still have the chance," suggests Zuber. "I don't think we can afford to keep producing milk if RCMA is not continually working to hold up our milk prices, especially while the industry faces cuts in the government's dairy support program," he states. "We need RCMA to survive."

The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency is a 22,000-member dairy farmer organization covering 11 Northeastern states.

Maryland To Grant Bonus For Tree Planting

ANNAPOLIS, MD — Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., Secretary of Maryland's Department of Agriculture, announced a one-time bonus of $100 for each acre enrolled in the Maryland Conservation Reserve Program and planted in trees. Funding is being provided through the Maryland Departments of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Maryland's Conservation

RCMA collects, from the marketplace, a Class I fluid milk differential over the minimum Class I price set by the Government, and RCMA returns this money in the form of "Over-Order Premiums" to all its farmer-members.

Reserve Program opens a 2 1/2-week sign up period July 17 in conjunction with the federal Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). Landowners or farmers wishing to set aside environmentally sensitive farmland can enroll at this time.

Landowners interested in the Conservation Reserve Program should contact a local office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service or Soil Conservation District to enroll. To obtain additional information about the Maryland Conservation Reserve Program contact Louise Lawrence at the Maryland Department of Agriculture (301/841-5863), 50 Harry S Truman Parkway, Annapolis Md, 21401.

Boyer Shows York 4-H Supreme Champion

BY JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

YORK, YORK CO. — Veteran tanbark competitor Bridgette Boyer opened her final 4-H dairy show season with a flourish, capturing Supreme Champion and all top Holstein class honors at the York County 4-H Roundup, July 19 at the York Fairgrounds.

Her senior-two-year-old took Supreme title over competing breed champions shown by Annie Rauhauser, Jersey, Kim McCleary, Brown Swiss, Kelly Morris, Guernsey, and Shannon Doll, Ayrshire.

The Supreme win marked the second consecutive year Bridgette claimed the revolving trophy for the top roundup honor. She is the daughter of Tom and June Boyer, York, and will begin studies at Delaware Valley College in the Fall.

Showmanship competition followed conformation classes, with Sharon Hammond making the selection for best handling in the showing. Taking his first top showmanship award was Junior division winner Todd Morris, Fawn Grove, with Chad Trimmer, East Berlin, runnerup.

Kelly Jo Myers, Thomasville, topped the Intermediate showmanship judging, over runnerup Brad Walker, New Freedom. In the Senior category, Bridgette Boyer was named winner, over runnerup Jenelle Boyer.

AYRSHIRE

intermediate yearling Ray-Knoll Liberators Belvedere.

BROWN SWISS

Kim McCleary dominated the Brown Swiss competition, taking grand champion and both senior and reserve champion rosettes with a pair of 5-year-olds.

Brookdale Telstar Nina, by Norvic Telstar, was named senior and grand champion for the Stewartstown 4-H'er, besting herdmate Beaver Creek Danny Bertie, named the reserve senior champion.

Although judge Mike Heath acknowledged the selection as a bit unusual, he selected Kelly Jo Myers' intermediate calf as the Brown Swiss reserve grand champion. Earlier, the stylish calf took the breed's junior champion award, over Kim McCleary's senior calf entry, named the reserve junior champion.

GUERNSEY

Kelly Morris topped the Guernsey runoffs, getting the judge's nod for senior and grand champion with her winning 3-year-old, Beas Bonus Tinkerbelle, by Lyn-dale Bonus S. Telesar.

Reserve senior and grand champion Guernsey was Golden Lock Fayette Tex Greta, exhibited by Jenelle Boyer. Her two junior calves also took the junior and reserve junior awards and best bred-and-owned, then paired with their winning dams to earn the York exhibitor first and second daughter-dam honors.

Also taking first place honors in the Guernsey classes were Todd Morris, senior calf, and Annie Rauhauser, intermediate yearling.

JERSEY

Best Senior Female Bred and Owned was exhibited by Furnace Creek Farms. At the halter of Furnace Creek Sexatlon Trudy is showman John Doll.

Annie Rauhauser also claimed the junior champion award with her intermediate calf. Reserve junior champion honors went to the winning junior calf exhibited by William Jenkins.

HOLSTEIN

Sunnybend Milkyway Harmony earned the Supreme award after taking championship of the Holstein breed show, then snagging another rosette in the Holstein owner-breeder class. She is sired by Harmony-Corners Duke.

Paired at the top of the Holstein show as reserve senior and grand was Bridgette's winning dry cow entry, Sunnybend Sexy Icicle. Entries from the 18-year-old's successful show string also earned her first and second places in the dam-daughter class.

Junior champion honors went to Bridgette's summer yearling winner, Sunnybend Nectarine Starbuck, over her reserve junior champion, a junior yearling.

Veal Producers Needed For PSU Research Study

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA — Penn State researchers are seeking help from state veal producers to complete a new veal research study partially funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Research will take place almost exclusively on privately owned veal-producing farms. The study will evaluate three different management practices: the effects of growth promotants, starting calf weights and individual as opposed to group housing. The researchers will be recording the growth rate, feed efficiency, carcass characteristics and other important factors for each calf in the study.

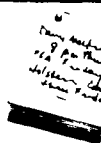

Researchers will need to have four to six different treatment groups of calves on each farm, according to Dr. L.L. Wilson, professor of animal science at Penn State and project leader for the research study. "We will probably have two different implants to test, so we'll need a group of calves that aren't implanted for a comparison group. In groups of calves where there are differences in starting weights or body frame size, small and large calves will be divided equally between the three growth-promotant groups," Wilson said.

Penn State researchers will provide assistance to participating veal producers in obtaining the necessary calf weights at three different times during the course of the study, and will help in other work associated with the project.

Wilson is particularly interested in finding producers who have or are now trying group-rearing production systems, so that a comparison can be made with individual stall rearing methods. For more information about the research project, contact Dr. Wilson by writing to 324 Henning Building, University Park, Pa. 16802, or call (814) 863-3659.

Maple Lawn Farm Sweeps Most Classes In Central Maryland Holstein Show

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent

TIMONIUM, MD — The Central Maryland Holstein Show at Timonium, Maryland, held July 17, was a good day for Maryland's Maple Lawn Farm. The lagers of Howard County took first place in more than half of the classes and also showed the best three females in the junior class. Coldsprings Farm in Carroll County exhibited the best three females in the senior division.

Judge Paul Knight of Airville, Pa., said many of the classes were difficult to for him to place with some of the state's finest dairy cattle all in one show.

It was Jenell Rinehart's day to shine as her 3-year-old cow, Rinehart Elevation Ruth, was named 4-H grand champion. Rinehart, also of Carroll County, achieved champion status with Ruth in the senior 4-H division.

Matt Iager's MD Maple Lawn Dixiecrat Queen helped him win the junior division 4-H championship. Judge Knight declared that the "big, growthy, white heifer showed a lot of style and balance."

In the 6-year-old cow class, Marlin Hoff's Coldsprings Ira Kewpie took first place over Skip Pieper's Eternal Flame Sexation Pearl. Hoff's big, black cow was described by Knight to be a fine, upstanding individual. She was born in March, 1980 and sired by Coldsprings Ira.

In the open class, grand champion of the show was Paul Harrison III of Howard County, with his 4-year-old cow, Hanover Hill Columbus Echo. Junior champion in the open class was Rosecroft Count Mae, a senior yearling shown by Alvin E. Meyers and Brian Derr of Carroll County.

Timothy Kaminkow of Harford County had a good showing in the intermediate heifer calf class with his fancy heifer, Ladys Manor Spruce C Lucy. Kaminkow also took first place in the junior fitting and showing contest, with Rebecca Patrick of Howard County coming in second.

Program Benefits Wildlife and Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The deadline is fast approaching for Southeastern and South-central Pennsylvania farmers to take advantage of the Pennsylvania Game Commission's Stream Fencing Program.

Designed to benefit both farmers and wildlife, the program involves providing and erecting 20 to 30 miles of low maintenance electrical fencing on streambanks. Installed at no cost to the farmer, the fencing will help contain livestock while improving soil quality.

The Game Commission predicts the fencing will lead to an increase of plant growth along the streams. Such vegetation provides a habitat for a variety of wildlife, such as muskrats, rabbits and frogs.

The additional plant growth will also add stability to the streambank, reducing soil erosion, stream undercutting (which can cause a streambank to collapse) and nutrient runoff by acting as a buffer during heavy periods of rain. Soil erosion is the largest source of water pollution in Pennsylvania. This excess sedimentation is carried by small streams into the Susquehanna River and contributes to the pollution entering the Chesapeake Bay.

The stream fencing program is funded through the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Cost Share Program. Under the contract signed between the Pennsylvania Game Commission and the Department of Environmental Resources - Bureau of Soil and Water Conservation, $100,000 will be appropriated for this program. However, the deadline for participating is mid-Summer, 1989. This allows only a short time for interested landowners to contact their local Farm-Game Manager or their Regional Game Commissioner Office. For more information, contact the Southeastern Extension (of the Game Commission) at 1-800-228-0791 or the Southcentral extension at 1-800-422-7554.

30 YEARS AGO

THIS WEEK

-Miss Mary Jane Hill, Lititz RD2, Penna. Peach Dessert Queen, this week sliced and served Governor David L. Lawrence a piece of peach pie which won her the state title last August.

Mary Jane, 17, is a senior at Warwick High School, and her parents operate a 12-acre fruit and vegetable farm in Brickerville.

The presentation began a personal appearance tour which will last through August 31. However Mary Jane will lose her title

August 29 when a new peach dessert will be selected at state finals in York. Most of the appearances will be during Pennsylvania Peach Time August 13 through 31. The peach pie she baked Governor Lawrence was made from early Lancaster County peaches.

-Discouraged after three consecutive years of a depressing potato cost-price squeeze situation, members of the Pennsylvania Cooperative Growers Association are in the process of working out their own salvation.

Mixing serious business with a bit of holiday fun, members of the co-op, their families and employees will gather for the first annual Potato Day at Potato City" near Coudersport in Potter County on Thursday Aug. 13.

-U.S. farmers realized net income in the first half of 1959 was at an average annual rate of approximately $12 billion according to a recent USDA report.

This is one billion dollars, or eight per cent lower than the first half of 1958, but more than a billion dollars above 1957.

Cash receipts from farm marketing were only slightly smaller than early '58, as lower farm product prices were in part offset by increased volume.

-Milk production in Pennsylvania during June has been estimated at 623 million lbs., down eight per cent from May, but two per cent above June, 1958. This is a record for June and the fourth consecutive record month for 1959.

Production for the first six months of 1959 totals 3,521 million lbs. or about one per cent above the 1959 yield.

-“Anna,” registered Holstein cow owner by John Stoltzfus, Elverson RD2, topped the Red Rose DHIA June records with a 305 day lactation completion record of 16,819 lbs. of milk, with 680 lbs. of butterfat from a 4.0% test.

-Penna. egg production dropped off nine per cent from May and two per cent below June, 1958. Total output of the state's laying hens for the month was 288 million eggs.

-Led by a 19 per cent decline in expected corn production, most of Pennsylvania's important field crops will show a decrease from last year, the State Department of Agriculture predicts.

-Carlisle Fair Grounds will be the site of the 27th annual purebred ewe and ram sale at 1 p.m. Aug. 1, sponsored by the Cumberland Co-op Wool Growers, Roy P. Miller, co-op sec.-treas. announced today.

-Cattle on feed in Penna. on July 1 totaled 50,000 head, a decrease of 28 per cent from the April 1 total of 69,000 according to the State Crop Reporting Service which compiled its first July survey in this category.

Becker's Barrow Brings Top Honors

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Karen Becker, 15, started her show season the way everyone would like to: with a champion. Judge Henry Gruber selected her 235-pound York-Hamp barrow to be grand champion at the Lancaster County FFA market hog show. Hatfield Packing entered the top bid of $2 per pound to buy Becker's hog. She plans to use the money to buy hogs for next year's Farm Show and to expand her herd of Dorset breeding and market sheep.

A first-year FFA member, Becker is no stranger to winning. She has had grand champion at the 1987 Farm Show, Elizabethtown Fair, and Manheim Fair. This year, the daughter of Marlin and Nancy Becker of Manheim will show 20 more hogs before the fair season is over.

The reserve champion spot went to a crossbred barrow shown by Tom Zartman Jr. of Ephrata. The 210-pound hog was purchased by the junior FFA member with the help of his father at the Lebanon County Youth To Youth Livestock Sale this year.

The hog was purchased by Gwaltney Packing for $1.60 per pound. Zartman, who will be a freshman this fall, had the grand champion at the 1986 Ephrata Fair. He is the 14-year-old son of Tom and Barb Zartman.

Lotts & Seneca Falls Community Host 1989 Farm Days

STANLEY, NY — Plans for 1989 Empire Farm Days, to be held August 8, 9 & 10 are well under way. This annual farm show is continuing to grow and change and be the largest outdoor, 3-day show in the Northeast. This year the 56th annual show, will be held at the Rodman Lott & Sons farm in Seneca Falls, New York. The site is located just south of the village of Seneca Falls on Route 414. The entire 300-plus acre site is located in one large parcel and all established grass-sod.

The local community and host farm family play a vital role in the success of the show. Thanks to the enthusiastic cooperation and coordination of local community leaders in the Seneca Falls area, exhibited during last year's show the 1989 Empire Farm Days should prove to be one of the best ever.

Agriculture is by far the most important economic sector in Seneca County contributing a value of production in excess of $35 million. It is diversified with production of milk, field crops, vegetables, grapes, horses, poultry, eggs and meat animals. As well as being a progressive and dynamic agricultural area it has the advantage of being nestled in the Finger Lakes making it one of the most scenic and exciting vacation spots in the Northeast.

Last year, close to 400 exhibitors participated in Empire Farm

Days with an estimated attendance of more than 100,000 interested and potential customers. Farmers from all over the Northeast make this an annual event to attend for their families and employees. This year will be the 56th annual farm show sponsored by the Empire State Potato Club, Inc.

The Lott family, this year's farm host, are a vital part of New York agricultural and a real asset to the local community. Rodman and Ellen Lott met and married in their home state of Pennsylvania and set up a crop farm operation from 1954-1968. Beginning in 1960 they also operated a 400-acre soybean operation in Delaware. In 1968 they moved to the panhandle of Florida and grew peanuts, beef cattle and pigs. They stayed in Florida for 12 years until they moved to Seneca County and set up their current 4270-acre crop farm (1970 acres owned, 2300 rented).

All of their four children, Ralph, Jinny, Mark and Lisie, have been involved in the various farming operations. Rodman, Ralph and Mark are all partners in the current farming enterprise. Ralph and his wife Shirley have two children, Nicole, age 9 and Rodman, age 6. Shirley is also an integral part of the business. Jinny teaches high school math. Mark's wife, Kathy, works at her father's business, JS Blowers & Sons. Lisie and her husband, Doug Freier, operate a crop farm in the area. Although corn and soybeans are the basis for the business, the family also raises sheep and dogs—Dachshunds and Rottweilers.

As evidence of their community contributions the Lotts were honored by the local Chamber of Commerce with its 1986 Progress Award.

Alfred State Students Receive Scholarships

ALFRED, NY — Two members of the Class of 1989 at Alfred State College are winners of $1,000 scholarships from Hatfield Packing Company.

Recipients are Anthony E. Moens of Pavilion, and David A. Pinckney Jr. of Cayuga. They received the awards during the college's fifth annual Honors Convocation.

Moens, who majored in animal husbandry at the two-year polytechnic college, was graduated "with honors." He is the son of Vernon R. Moens of Pavilion and Ladonna Moens of Batavia, and is a 1987 graduate of Perry Central School.

Pinckney earned his associate's degree in general agriculture at Alfred State. A 1983 graduate of Union Springs Central School, he is the son of David A. and Linda K. Pinckney.

The Hatfield Packing Co. is the largest processor of pork products in the East, and swine raised at the Alfred State farm complex are trucked to the Hatfield facility.

In appreciation for the college's "dedication to the livestock and meat industry," Hatfield provides two $1,000 scholarships annually to students of agriculture who have "an interest in pursuing a career in the livestock and meat industry," the donor notes.

Presenting the scholarship awards on behalf of Hatfield Packing Co. was Dr. James Thompson, dean of the School of Agriculture at Alfred State.

Stoltzfus Hosts Chester County Holstein Field Day

The shade and beauty of the farm of Bill and Donna Stoltzfus offered some relief from the sweltering heat on Thursday when the Chester County Holstein Club gathered for their field day. This is the home of Wilonna Holsteins. The herd has a BAA of 107 with 8 EX, 25 VG, 12 G+ and 9 G. Herd average is 18,500 pounds with butterfat at 3.9%. The restored log cabin which the Stoltzfus family calls home was built in the early 1700's. Bill and Donna have three children, Olivia, Lauren and Eric.

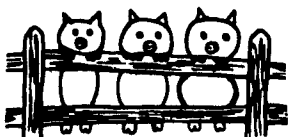

He may be new at the job, but he's hardly new to the dairy industry. Walter Wurster, Chester County's new dairy agent, is from Berks County where he and his son, David, operate Holly Hill Holsteins in Ottsville. David Swartz (right) has been appointed interim director in Perry County. Wurster was on hand at the field day conducting the cow judging portion.

Free Water Testing At Nottingham Country Fair

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Free testing of water samples for nitrates will be available to the public at the 10th annual Nottingham Country Fair, Saturday (July 22, 1989). Testing will occur at the Mobile Nutrient Testing Lab, with samples being accepted from 11 am to 4 pm. Same day results available to those who bring water samples with them to the fairgrounds.

Information concerning The Chesapeake Bay Program, erosion and sediment control, and ground-water quality will also be available at the Mobile Lab. This activity will be located near the Pavilion #3 area in Nottingham County Park, West Nottingham Township in southern Chester County.

Interested in having water tested? The following method should be used to gather a sample suitable for testing. Use a clean, covered jar to hold a one cup sample of water. If taking a tap water sample, allow the water to run roughly two minutes or until it comes out cold. This makes certain that it is a fresh sample, not one that has been sitting in the pipes. The sample should be refrigerated or put on ice immediately, and should be tested within 1-2 days of being collected.

The Mobile Nutrient Testing Lab is being sponsored by the Chester County Conservation District, and the Department of Environmental Resources' Bureau of Soil and Water Conservation. For further information please contact Dianne Soccio, Resource Conservationist, at (215) 696-0398 or 696-5126.

Empire Farm Days Are Rich In History

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, July 29, 1989-A39

STANLEY, NY — As far back as 1933 there has been an agricultural show sponsored by the Empire State Potato Club, Inc. which was hosted by New York state farmers and was committed to bringing farmers in the Northeast the newest techniques and equipment available to agriculture.

Since then, this annual event has undergone many changes including name, location and size but, its sponsor and purpose have remained constant. It brings the farmer and agribusiness community together, all in one place, all at one time, at a high quality agricultural trade show. Today Empire Farm Days has grown to be the largest outdoor, three-day show in the Northeast, with more than 400 exhibitors and an estimated yearly attendance of more than 100,000 people. This year's show is scheduled for August 8, 9, & 10th.

The event originated as the Potato Field Days in 1933. In 1964 the show was called the Potato Field Day and Farm Materials Exhibition and was hosted by: 1964-Humphreys Farm, Hartford; 1965 Co-hosts McCormick Farms and William Gozelski, Gainesville; 1966 co-hosts Russell Matthews and Monroe County Department of Parks, Menden.

In 1967 the show had grown to such a magnitude that another name change was required to reflect the scope of the event. Empire Farm Days was born.

Since then the following farms have hosted the annual event: 1967 Lucian Hills, Wayland; 1968 Co-hosts Smith Coulter, Lincoln Knolls and Harold Rice, Canastota; 1969 Selden Farm, Greigsville; 1970 King Brothers, LaFayette; 1971 John P. Halpin & Sons, Avon; 1972-73 New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, Dryden; 1974-75 Neenan Brothers, Holcomb; 1976-77 John P. Halpin & Sons, Seneca Castle; 1978-80 N. Palladino & Sons, Pompey; 1981-82 New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, Dryden; 1983-85 Brock Acres, Holcomb; 1986-87

N. Palladino & Sons, Pompey, and 1988-89-90 Rodman Lott & Sons farm, Seneca Falls.

Empire Farm Days is also very unique because it has a group of cooperators made up of organizations that have proven to be committed to the same goals of the Empire State Potato Club, Inc. These cooperators include: American Agriculturist, New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, New York Farm Equipment Dealers' Association, New York State Farm Equipment Club, New York State Electric and Gas Corporation, Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation and the Cornell Cooperative Extension.

Eric Flaxenburg has watched his 40-acre abandoned farm grow into a multi-million dollar company that produces apparel from sheepskins.

Seven Sheep Launch Multi-Million Dollar Company

BY LOU ANN GOOD
ELVERSON (Chester Co.) — To take a flock of seven sheep and turn them into a multi-million dollar international business sounds like a dream. For Eric and Jean Flaxenburg of Elverson, it's "shear" reality. They now use 10,000 to 20,000 sheepskins annually to fill orders for their shearling coats and apparel worn here and abroad.

In 1966, the couple purchased a 40-acre abandoned farm bordered by the French Creek State Park. They did not intend to start a business. Eric, commuted to a Philadelphia university where he taught American civilization. Jean, a fashion designer, quit her job when their first child was born.

Putting her fashion flair to practice, Jean designed a baby bunting from one of their sheepskins.

Amazed, she noticed that whenever she lay their colicky baby in it, he quieted.

Convinced there was a market for her sheepskin baby buntings, she stitched a dozen, which Eric showed to a major New York department store.

The store ordered 12, paid $20 a piece, slapped a $75 price tag on them, and did not pay the Flaxenburgs for eight months.

Frustrated by the redtape involved in wholesales, and perhaps, enticed by the high price tags of retail sales, the Flaxenburgs decided to pursue direct markets.

They printed brochures and advertised their baby buntings and sheeplined coats that Jean designed.

That was in 1970. After they had mailed the brochures, people ridiculed the ideal of selling a high price item through mailorder. Then, typical mail-order catalogues flaunted cheap, gimmicky wares.

"We were ignorant," Eric admits. "We did it."

It was a good thing they did, for the Flaxenburgs proved the business community wrong. Not only did the Flaxenburgs sell mail order, they were forerunners in a whole new era of upscale catalogues.

As Eric fingers the fleece of a Corriedale that will become part of a $2,000 coat made by his company, he insists, "We were very lucky. He pauses, then adds, "It's better to be lucky than smart."

He shuns comments that infer that marketing skills and brilliance caused the business to flourish.

"We were simply there at the right place, at the right time. Postal rates were cheap. Shearlings were fashionable. In fashion, success is 10 percent hard work and 90 percent luck," Eric insists.

But luck did not eliminate sleepless nights of agonizing how they were going to pull through finan-Flaxenburg examines one of the coats that a sewer from his company stitches from beginning to end.

An employee of French Creek Sheep & Wool cuts a coat from one of the 10,000 to 20,000 sheepskins that the company uses annually to produce its shearling coats.

Celebrities such as Tom Selleck cannot resist coats sewn by the French Creek Company.

cially. In fact, Eric said, "In this business, you never feel confident. People think we have it made—traveling to New York for trade and fashion shows, visiting tanneries in Europe—but there are times I don't enjoy the business at all. There is always something bad happening even when good is happening."

In fashion, it's easy to be successful and it's easy to fail, and these nagging doubts add to the pressures of keeping control of a ever-changing business.

As Eric sits in his office four stories high in a silo-like tower attached to the barn that has been remodeled to house all the stages of clothing construction, he talks about the toughness of surviving in the fashion and business world.

He glances out the French doors that open onto a balcony overlooking a panoramic view of the rolling countryside, and reflects on the stresses that accompany the business. He said, "You learn to cope. To live through it. The more you live through, the more you learn not to worry about things that will never happen."

His philosophy is that "Worry is like paying interest on money, you never borrowed."

Eric also has a philosophy that: "People on the farm often have the wrong attitude. They don't believe they can charge as much as they need for their product and their marketing skills are poor."

The Flaxenburgs are proof that if you have a good product, people will pay the price. "But, don't rely on your neighbors to buy it," he instructs.

The Flaxenburgs went for the upscale market. Their clientele caters to well-to-do women between the ages of 40 and 60 and includes celebrities such as Ginger Rogers and Tom Selleck.

"There is a confusion between price and value," Eric said. "What is an item worth? It's only a perception of value. And if people feel they are getting something, they are willing to pay for it."

The Flaxenburgs insist on quality in their shearlings and in their workmanship and they make sure their customers know the detail and time it takes to custom make each garment that is made by the same person from start to finish.

While fashion goes in cycles, the Flaxenburgs strive to offer a variety of items for the discriminating buyer: Handknit sweaters crocheted so that items can be worn inside out, sweaters knitted and washed to offer wash n' wear wools, grease wool sweaters made from unbleached, lightly scoured yarns still flecked with hayseed that resists wind and water, shearling sheep-lined coats ranging in prices from several hundred to over two thousand dollars, lamb-suede dresses, slacks, boots, gloves and handcrafted accessories.

The company makes 3,000 to 5,000 coats annually to provide 20 percent of their business. Accessories make up five to 10 percent of their business, with the remainder in leathers, suedes and knitwears.

Jean, who designs each garment, watches European fashion. The U.S. generally follows two to three years behind the European trends. Jean creates 100 designs, twice a year. Annually, they put out five catalogs.

It takes four months to do a catalogue. French Creek Wool hires three females and one male model for four days of shooting on their farm with its tall timbers, and horses, chickens, Chinese geese, sheep, and guineas.

Fashions are fickle. It is not unusual for an item they expect to be hot not to sell. Over the years, Flaxenburg said they learned to expect 25 percent of the catalogue items to be incredible, 25 percent right on target, and 25 percent to 'dog' (not sell).

And that's where Flaxenburg's perception of value comes to play. He experiments. Sometimes he takes the item that "dogged" and has it modeled from a different angle. Other times, he places a higher price tag on it and watches it sell.

Case in point is the $75 baby bunting the company started out with. They were a bit difficult to have made and the company wasn't making a profit on them. They upped the price to $140 intending to phase them out. Instead sales tripled.

Eric tauntingly refers to himself as the king or his majesty of the company. His job includes anticipating problems such as raw material quality not being up to par or prices not covering cost and profits. He remarks that their 35 employees are super. "The place runs itself. I'm only here to give direction."

At one time, the company had women making the items in their homes. Eric laments that the government with the backing of unions caused too much hassle for them to continue the practice. In addition to their 35 employees, the company contracts some work with other industries.

With their pricey items, French Creek recognizes that their company will never be a household name, but that doesn't bother them. It gives them greater satisfaction in producing a quality item. It's that niche that they hope to keep in the market.

Eric said, "Dreams change. Anticipation offers the biggest thrill, but people who look for things are ultimately disappointed. People live in delusion that after they achieve a dream, it will be perfect. Instead they need a few problems to keep juices flowing. You can't buy solutions to every problem."

"I thought I'd write," Eric admits as he glanced at the tall bookshelves that lined his office walls. "Now," he grimaced, "I write copy for the catalogues."

He shrugs and adds, "A person who really likes what they are doing is reasonably happy and proud of the things that they accomplish." He includes himself in that number.

Pushing the business success aside, Eric insists that he and his wife are most proud that they raised five kids who never got into serious trouble. The children are now 15, 17, 18, 20 and 21 years old. Eric said he believes that kids find security in a large family. And that they achieve a sense of permanence by growing up in their same place.

They encourage their children to start their own businesses, for, he claims, there is nothing as exciting as starting your own business.

He's watched French Creek Sheep & Wool Company outgrow the basement of their 18th-century farmhouse, watched the renovated barn that houses the manufacturing and retail outlet expand. But some things never change. The knitting room set up in the old horse stalls with its brick floors still have the hoof indentations in them. Each garment is sewn entirely by one seamstress who signs the finished product. French Creek Sheep & Wool Company continues to offer superb apparel by people who love their craft.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My freezer is beginning to fill up again. Rather than go to an orchard and pick sour cherries, I bought twenty pounds at a local store. It surely took a while to seed all of them. The work would have gotten done sooner with a helper or two. And, as our blueberries had all of their buds eaten off by sparrows, I had to buy some of them too as they are one of my husband's favorites.

Potatoes are very expensive just now at the market. So we should be glad that we planted almost 400 feet of them this spring. I've been gradually digging them as needed for our meals.

While I'm busy with the food end, the men are busy with the animal end of farming. They built a fence to keep the dry cows in a separate area of our meadow. And, they also are moving some heifers to another pasture a distance from our barn. The one problem that arises here is feeding and watering them as they do not have access to the river. Our summer cottagers have fenced in their manicured lawns and so a sprayer tank of water has to be hauled to them regularly.

These heifers will be sharing the pasture with a pair of deer and a fawn. This is an unusual occurrence for us as we live near Lancaster and not in an area where deer live. However, this piece of land is rather heavily wooded and full of shrubs.

Recently when I went there to pick wineberries, I couldn't even penetrate the brush and thorns. I gave up after stumbling over fallen trees and almost spilling my bucket of berries. They, too, will help to fill the freezer and be used on cereal or put into a jello mold next winter.

This Lancaster County farmer has been planting Pro-Cut for the past 3 years, and all of those fields are high producers. Ketterling markets his entire alfalfa crop as to quality hay, and made special note of Pro-Cut's fine stems and extra leafy growth. Jim says, "Pro-Cut really is my kind of alfalfa."

On being a farm wife - And other hazards Joyce Bupp

At first glance, it looks just like all the other millions of stalks of corn jutting skyward around southern York County.

Strong, reddish-colored anchor roots firmly hold the thick, green stem into its patch of soil. The stalk's height has pretty near doubled in the space of just the last week, and its crisp, wide leaf blades glow a healthy, deep shade of green.

Basking in mid-July's, height-of-summer, sunshine and caressed by the heat and humidity on which corn, if not humans, thrives, the stalk is a living picture of what a corn plant is supposed to look like.

"What a difference a year makes," observes the Farmer.

For this lush stalk is something of a symbol of the vagaries, the fickleness, the unpredictability of a Mother Nature still very much in charge of the condition of farmer's livelihoods and well-being.

The stalk, you see, is a volunteer. Sometime in the past many months, a single kernel of corn made contact with this tiny patch of bare soil, located just outside the window of our calf nursery.

Sun-baked asphalt pavement surrounds it on three sides, and the outside wall of the nursery building is a mere foot away. Morning is about half gone before shade turns to sunshine at this northwest corner of the structure, afternoon's heat often registers well over 100-degrees on the outdoor wall thermometer nearby. It's a corner of exposure to pounding rains and persistent wind.

Still the stalk has grown like gangbusters. And, I've developed an attachment to it as a sort of green mascot, representative of the season.

For the memories of several consecutive years past are still too vivid in our minds to overlook the preciousness of even one stalk of corn. Just a mere 12 months ago, this tiny patch of soil lay baked and barren. Those few straggly blades of grass which had tried to grow lay shriveled, brown and dead from thirst.

Even the most skilled tiller of the soil could not make corn grow without the rains which persistently eluded many areas.

What a difference a year makes. Vegetation pokes through every hole and crack in the driveways, building foundations, and sprouts where a pile of haylage accumulated on top of a forage wagon.

A Virginia creeper vine (sort of looks like five-leafed poison ivy, but without the itch) has nimbly climbed the metal ladder leading up to the old feed room, where a heifer pen has replaced the old milking parlor area.

For years, the kids used this vacant room as their playhouse, furnishing it with an old living room couch, chairs, and such valuables. Mice families were frequent visitors. When last seen, the lead end of the Virginia creeper was laying claim, sprawling across the couch, spurred by frequent waterings when the rain gutter overflows during cloudbursts.

A deep sense of appreciation washes over my increasingly frequent trips to the garden. Even the persistent growth of nutgrass and foxtail clumps in the rows of glads, asters and statice fails to detract from the satisfaction of watching plants respond to plentiful moisture.

In fact, constant vigilance is demanded to avoid the treacherous patch of Attack Cucumbers. While a couple dozen have been caught and detained in a plastic five-gallon pickling bucket, a few of the more elusive ones managed to escape, mutate, and return to the size and shape of mortar shells, to do battle with bare toes.

The constant movement in the pumpkin patch has not proved to be a convention of the local garter snake population, but merely the jostling for space by runners running rampant.

True, not every field of corn got planted . . . and herbicide washed direct to the roots of soybeans by untimely downpours cut into some stands . . . and the wheat is light in weight . . . and hay bales mold faster than they can be salted and shuffled around a mow.

A new season. With an alternate assortment of challenges.

But — what a difference a year makes.

Vegetarian Kids Can Be Healthy

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Can kids eat a vegetarian diet safely? Yes, but within limits, says Dr. Madeleine Sigman, assistant professor of food science at Penn State University. There are several versions of vegetarianism, and not all are ideal for children.

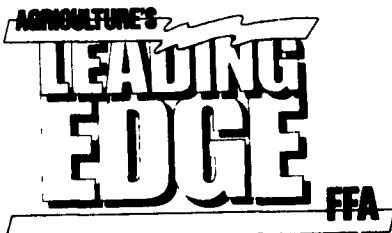

Many families calling themselves "vegetarians" eat no red meat but still consume poultry, eggs, fish and milk. Some, technically termed "lacto-ovo-vegetarians," refuse poultry and fish. Others, "lactovegetarians," omit eggs as well. "Only those who abstain from all animal and dairy foods are pure vegetarians," says Sigman.

Which form of vegetarianism should parents choose? Sigman recommends including milk, dairy foods and eggs, since children's nutritional needs are great while they're growing. Children who eat none of these animal products risk serious vitamin D and B-12 and iron deficiencies and must take supplements. Just as serious, a true vegetarian diet may not supply children with the food energy they need to grow, since plants need to be high in bulk and low in calories.

The ideal vegetarian diet for kids requires a wide variety of foods. Include fruits, vegetables, whole grains, nuts, seeds, peas, beans, eggs and dairy products or soy-fortified substitutes. Mixing these categories of foods every day eliminates the need to plan strictly to get the complete proteins found in red meat, a drawback to pure vegetarian diets. "Mixing proteins from these foods over the course of the day satisfies our bodies' growth and maintenance needs," says Sigman.

Vegetarian diets are worth considering for their health benefits. They help reduce the chance of coronary heart disease and certain kinds of cancer. The American Dietetic Association last year declared, "vegetarian diets are healthful and nutritionally adequate when appropriately planned." So plan well and eat healthily!

Is Breakfast Really The Most Important Meal Of The Day?

Over the years breakfast has been called everything from the cornerstone of a healthy diet to the meal that determines whether or not children will function well in school. Some people believe that adults who skip breakfast will experience a midmorning slump as well as fail at any attempt to lose weight. But does skipping breakfast really place people at such an array of disadvantages?

A group of scientists at the University of Texas who observed 9 to 11 year olds in a controlled setting reported that skipping the morning meal had "adverse effects" on late morning problem-solving performance. The researchers believed that lowered levels of blood sugar on the days when breakfast was not eaten was related to the decreased ability to solve problems.

Research on adults, done at the University of California at Los Angeles, also arrived at some pro-breakfast findings. They discovered an association between eating breakfast and longevity. Ten years observation of 7,000 men and women revealed that those who regularly ate breakfast lived longer. And in a study done at the University of Minnesota, overweight people who consumed their entire allotment of daily calories at breakfast lost weight, but most of the participants gained weight when they consumed all their daily allotment of calories at dinnertime.

Not all studies on breakfast consumption show that the morning meal is important. However, while not all researchers and dietitians share the same views about why eating breakfast is or is not important, they all agree that there is absolutely no good argument for skipping the morning meal. They do have a consensus of opinion about what a good breakfast should include.

A good breakfast should include complex carbohydrates, fiber, protein, and vitamin C. However, for many people that translates into the traditional American menu for a nutritious breakfast, one that can easily be skipped for many reasons: cold or hot cereal, milk, orange juice and toast. It does not have to be this way. This menu is a healthy way to start the day, but nowhere is it engraved in stone that breakfast must include these traditional foods. There's nothing wrong with last night's leftover pizza. There are carbohydrates in the crust, protein and calcium in the cheese, and vitamins A and C in the tomato sauce.

Other untraditional, but nutritious breakfast food could be a banana dabbed with peanut butter (high in fat but a good source of protein) or a peanut butter and apple butter sandwich with raisins served on whole wheat toast. Even a slice of lean turkey or skinless chicken on whole grain bread with some vitamin C-rich cantaloupe constitutes a healthy meal. Do not be afraid to experiment with your own new combinations.

If you are simply too rushed in the morning or cannot eat when you first get up, take a piece of bread and fruit to work, or bread and plain yogurt with some fresh fruit mixed in (Already-sweetened yogurt often has twice the calories of unflavored).

If you must have baked goods, make your own muffins rather than buying commercial ones. Homemade muffins can be made with whole-wheat flour, wheat or oat bran as well as all-purpose flour. Use fruit juice, blueberries, cranberries, raisins, or apples instead of sugar. Muffins are easy and do not require a great deal of time to prepare, and they will keep for weeks in the freezer and can easily be defrosted by placing them in your microwave oven (allow 45 seconds on high per muffin) or by taking them from the freezer the night before.

Sacrificing a few minutes sleep for the little time it takes to prepare a delicious, healthy breakfast, is a very worthwhile tradeoff.

Dairy Ambassadors Chosen For Dauphin County

At a pageant on June 23, three dairy ambassadors and a little miss dairy princess, took over dairy promotion duties in Dauphin County for outgoing Dauphin County Dairy Princess, Linda Buffington.

Scholl, daughter of Fred and Linda Scholl of Berksburg; and Donna Shetterly, daughter of Donald and Sandy Shetterly of Millersburg. The Little Miss Dauphin County Dairy Princess is six-year-old Heidi Miller, daughter of Mike and Linda Miller, Harrisburg.

During the program, guests were entertained by a clogging routine by Linda Buffington and her brother, Floyd, and a special milk song by Heidi Miller and her family. The Master of Ceremonies for the evening was Robert Schaffer of Elizabethville. Following the program everyone enjoyed ice cream sundaes, courtesy of the Dauphin County Dairy Princess Committee.

FFA, 4-H Livestock Auction Planned At Maryland State Fair

TIMONIUM, MD — 4-H/FFA members will auction off their prize steer, sheep, and market hogs, Wednesday, August 30, 7 p.m., in the Cow Palace. Individuals, businessmen, company representatives, and spectators are all invited to attend the auction and bid on the livestock.

"The advantage of buying livestock at this auction is that you are guaranteed high quality meat," said Livestock Chairperson and 4-H Volunteer Dr. Grant Hill. "These 4-H/FFA kids have invested a lot of time and money in their livestock in order to prepare them for competition and for the best prices they can receive at the auction." Arrangements will be made for free delivery of the livestock to a selected local meat packer who will package the meat to the buyer's specification, or the animal can be resold at the Auction for market price.

In order to qualify for the auction, the livestock will compete in various shows held Monday, August 28, and Tuesday, August 29. The livestock judges will name the grand champions and a selection committee of knowledgeable individuals will choose the allotted number of livestock to be sold based on quality. The grand champion will be auctioned off first, followed by the animals of that species who were chosen by the selection committee.

Livestock is bid on by the pound. Last year's 1280 pound grand champion steer sold for $1.50 per pound, the 115 pound grand champion market lamb sold for $16.00 per pound, and the 230 pound grand champion market hog sold for $5.75 per pound. Last year's average price per pound for steer was $1.13; for lamb, $1.94, and for market hog, $1.49 per pound.

Each student receives the money raised from the sale of their livestock and usually invests it in their education or a new livestock project. "This is an excellent experience for the kids, it teaches them responsibility for their animals and how to make wise management decisions," said Dr. Hill. "And, it enables the buyer to support youth, advertise their business, and stock their freezers all at the same time."

For additional information on the 4-H/FFA Livestock Auction, contact Dr. Richard Angus at 301-454-3736.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — George Hile Jr., Sunbury, requested a recipe for making garlic and dill pickles in a crock. He also wanted to know the secret for making pickles crisp and crunchy. Thanks Barbara Randall, Holcomb, NY; and to an anonymous contributor, for answering.

Kosher Style Dill Pickles

8 to 10 full-sized, unblemished pickling cucumbers or as many as will "swim" freely in the brine.

Handful of fresh dill stalks

4 cloves unpeeled garlic, flattened

1 gallon water

½ cup coarse Kosher salt

4 teaspoons pickling spice

Wash cucumbers. Place them in a clean crock large enough to cover the pickles with at least 2-inches of brine. Add dill and garlic. Bring the water, salt and pickling spice to a boil. Boil, covered, for 5 to 10 minutes. Cool completely then pour over the pickles, being sure that they are well covered with brine. Place a heavy plate on top of the pickles to hold them under the surface and cover the crock with a cloth. Let stand at room temperature, checking daily and skimming any scum that appears.

After 2 or 3 days, taste the brine and, if desired, add more spices. Let pickles ferment for 3 days at least. Check for degree of "doneness" by cutting off a slice. Return the pickle to brine if it isn't ready. When they are pickled to your taste, transfer to glass jars. Cover with brine, spices included. Cover and refrigerate. They will keep well for several weeks, but will slowly become more pickled despite the cold.

If you prefer, full sour pickles, leave them in the crock until they are a translucent green throughout. Transfer to jars; add spices and refrigerate as for half sours.

Crisp Dill Pickles

Make crisp, crunchy dill pickles by using ½ teaspoon powdered alum per gallon of cucumbers. Add a grape leaf to each jar. Make a brine from:

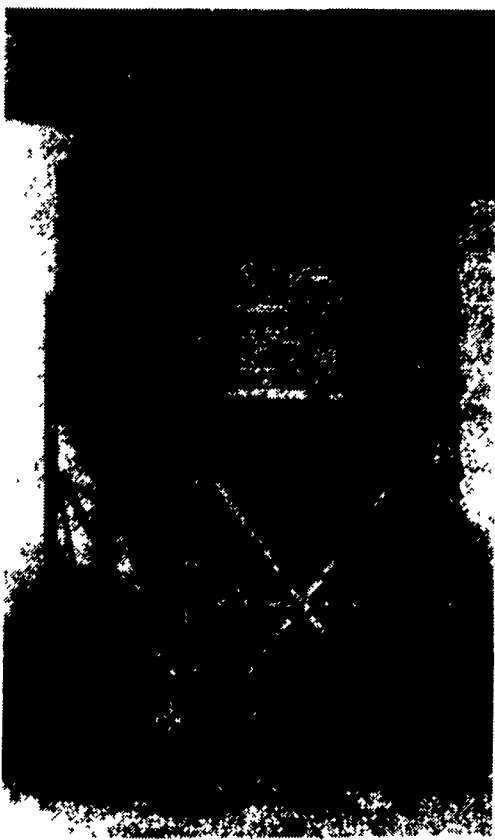

1 cup coarse salt

3 quarts water

1 quart cider vinegar

Pack each jar with 2 heads fresh dill, 2 cloves peeled garlic, 1 grape leaf, cucumbers to fill. Cover with brine and process 5 minutes in boiling water.

Swimming Tips

National Geographic News Service

Experts offer ocean swimmers this advice about sharks:

1. Swim at beaches patrolled by lifeguards, and promptly leave the water when told.

2. Avoid swimming in murky water and at the mouths of freshwater rivers or other areas where edible garbage accumulates.

3. Don't swim alone. Sharks are more likely to avoid groups of people than individuals.

4. Don't enter the water from a boat or pier where sharks may be present by diving in or making undue noise. The sound may attract them or even trigger an attack.

5. Remember that from a shark's viewpoint, the silhouette of a surfer, or a diver in black wetsuit and fins, may resemble a seal. A brilliantly colored bathing suit may resemble tropical fish. Some experts warn against wearing bright metallic objects such as jewelry.

6. Avoid provocative behavior. Don't annoy sharks by pulling their tails, chasing, or trying to pet them. Sharks are often attracted to areas where divers are spearfishing. If you spear a fish, remove it from the water as soon as possible.

7. If you see a shark, leave the water immediately but without undue commotion. (The shark may think you're a wounded fish.) If possible, keep an eye on the shark while departing. Be especially careful when leaving the water, when the shark isn't visible.

8. If a shark comes too close or attacks, firmly push it away, preferably with a stick or other blunt object. Use an arm or leg as a last resort. Try to avoid jabbing and wounding, which may only anger the shark.

9. If a shark bites, strike and gouge at its eyes and gills to persuade it to let go.

10. Start first aid immediately after being bitten. Most fatalities are caused by shock and loss of blood. If possible, try to control bleeding with an improvised tourniquet or pressure bandage even before leaving the water. Once on land, stay quiet and warm until help arrives.

A reef shark with an escort of barjacks rests on the bottom after a day on the prowl. The animal is a member of the requiem shark family, which includes many of the species most dangerous to humans. Reef sharks, which dwell along coastal areas, account for a high percentage of attacks on swimmers.

Every One Can Be Active

Being active is important. And it's fun. Here are some active people who have set some amazing records.

Talk about arm strength

■ Victor Cerda, Sol Lozano, Harry Little III, and Manuel Rodriguez twirled batons for over 5 days.

■ In 1984, Dan Marino of the Miami Dolphins gained a total of 5,084 yards passing a football.

And what about those stomach muscles

■ William K. Chico Johnson was able to spin 81 hula hoops at one time. And none of these hoops were spinning around his arms, legs, or head. All 81 of them spun between his shoulders and hips.

■ Ashrita Furman did 7400 somersaults in a row. She rolled all the way from Boston to Lexington, Massachusetts. That's more than 12 miles.

How about this for endurance

■ Guy Stewart of Ohio jumped 130,077 jumps on a pogo stick.

■ Fourteen students from the University of Seattle covered 602 miles playing leapfrog. That is about the distance from St. Louis to Pittsburgh.

Or this for flexibility

■ Nadia Comaneci of Romania was the first gymnast to score a perfect 10 in the Olympics. She won a total of 5 gold medals.

Tough to beat

■ What about all-around fitness? One of the top athletes has to be Babe Didrikson Zaharis. She was an all-American basketball player. She won an Olympic silver medal in the high jump. And she won Olympic gold medals for the javelin throw and for the hurdles. She won 19 golf championships. And she holds the woman's world record for the longest baseball throw - 296 feet.

Set your own records

No one expects you to play NFL football or win 3 Olympic medals — yet. But you can have fun setting records in your own neighborhood.

■ What's the record for the shortest amount of time it takes to run around the block?

■ What's the record for the most jumps with a jump rope without missing?

■ What's the record for the most baskets in a row from the free-throw line?

You can create all kinds of contests. Keep track of the results. And see if you can set new records as you get more fit.

How To Set Up A Par Trail

What's a par trail? It's a path with several stations. At each station you do a different activity. In some cities and towns there are par trails already set up. You can also make your own.

Station 1 - Skip around the swing set. Run around the swing set. Hop around the swing set. Then jump on a swing and pump 50 times. When you're done, go on to Station 2.

Station 2 - Skip rope 50 times on both feet. Skip 10 times on your right foot. Skip 10 times on your left foot. Then skip 50 more times on both feet. Move to Station 3.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

When you want barbecued chicken for dinner, but don't want to spend hours in the kitchen, turn to your microwave oven and outdoor grill for help.

Microwave the chicken until almost fully cooked. Then transfer it to a hot grill to brown and take on a barbecue flavor. For leisurely cooking, talk your spouse or a friend into taking charge of grilling while you microwave a side dish, toss a salad and make dessert.

Precooking chicken in the microwave means shorter grilling time, less worry of undone chicken with a charred coating, and less flare-up during grilling.

To microwave chicken, first cut it in serving-size pieces. You could just quarter it or leave it whole, but then grilling time is longer. Arrange pieces or quarters with thickest parts to outside edges on a meat rack. (Place whole chicken breast-side down.) Cover with waxed paper. Microwave on High power, allowing about 7 minutes per pound. Rearrange and turn pieces, quarters or whole chicken over halfway through cooking for even cooking. Drain chicken before transferring to the grill.

To grill chicken, have grill preheated or coals ready so chicken can go directly from microwave to grill. Use medium setting or place chicken 4 inches from coals. Turn chicken over and baste occasionally with a marinade or sauce until chicken is golden brown.

Today's recipe for Mediterranean Micro-Grilled Chicken calls for marinating the chicken pieces in a highly flavored sauce. The sauce — or marinade — adds a tangy, exotic touch. For the most flavor, marinate chicken 4 hours or more. In today's recipe, the marinade is intense in flavor, so even a 15-minute soak at room temperature will yield tasty results. Be sure to refrigerate chicken in marinade if it must stand longer than 15 minutes.

For safety's sake, I like to cook the marinade before using it for basting. Bring the mixture to a boil and let it boil a minute or two. This insures that raw chicken juices are fully cooked, so there'll be no danger of food poisoning when marinade is used for basting chicken even towards end of grilling.

Making the other parts of this meal takes about 20 minutes or less. Quick Green Rice calls for instant "minute" rice and fresh chopped vegetables. It cooks in about 5 minutes. It's a delightfully light and mild-flavored bed for grilled chicken or for other grilled meats. Turtle Brownies start with a microwave brownie mix that cooks in less than 5 minutes, too. (Or it can start with already-baked brownies.) Both rice and brownies need standing time after cooking — the rice, to finish absorbing moisture and to finish cooking without getting overly soft, and the brownies, to cook done in the center without dry edges and to cool for easy cutting.

Microwave rice first and let it stand tightly covered. Microwave brownies and, if necessary, let them stand during your meal. Add topping and pecans right before serving.

Mediterranean Micro-Grilled Chicken

½ cup wine vinegar
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon Italian seasoning
2½ - to 3-pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut in serving pieces or quartered

Garnish: lemon slices (optional)

In a dish large enough to hold chicken, stir together vinegar, soy sauce, lemon juice and Italian seasoning. Add chicken, turning to coat each piece. Cover and refrigerate 4 to 12 hours, occasionally turning chicken and basting with marinade.

Drain chicken. Pour marinade into microwave-safe 1-quart measure or bowl; reserve. Place chicken, skin-side up, on microwave meat rack. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 10 minutes. Turn chicken over, rearrange and re-cover. Continue microwaving (High) 5 to 10 minutes or until chicken is almost done.

Transfer chicken to hot grill or let stand while heating marinade. Microwave marinade on High 2 to 3 minutes or until boiling; then boil it for 1 minute. Grill chicken 4 inches from coals (or on medium setting) about 20 minutes or until golden brown and done. Turn chicken over and brush generously with marinade several times during cooking. If desired, garnish with lemon slices. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Each serving — 1/5 of recipe: 226 calories, 38g protein, 7g fat, 1g carbohydrate, 277mg sodium, 126mg cholesterol.

Note: If desired, remove skin from chicken before marinating. Then be extra careful not to overcook when grilling, or chicken will be dried out.

Quick Green Rice

2 green onions, thinly sliced (separate green tops from white parts)

¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil or butter
1½ cups instant rice
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup chopped fresh spinach*
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
Salt and pepper to taste

Place white parts of onion, green pepper and oil in microwave-safe 2-quart casserole. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 1 to 2 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in rice and broth. Re-cover and microwave (High) 4 to 5 minutes or until rice is barely tender. Stir in spinach and parsley. Season to taste. Cover and let stand about 5 minutes. Serve hot or warm. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

*If desired, substitute ½ to 1 cup thawed frozen green peas for spinach.

Hint: This reheats well. Microwave (High) about 2 minutes per cup of rice. If necessary, stir in a tablespoon of water.

Each serving — ¼ of recipe: 134 calories, 3g protein, 7g fat, 15g carbohydrate, 207mg sodium, 0 cholesterol.

Turtle Brownies

1 package microwave brownie mix or refrigerated ready-to-microwave brownies*

4 tablespoons caramel topping
½ cup pecan halves

Prepare brownies as directed on package. Remove brownies from microwave and set pan on countertop. Cool at least 10 minutes. Drizzle with caramel topping; carefully spread over brownies. Top with pecan halves. Cut into squares to serve. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes 9 servings.

Each serving: 250 calories, 2g protein, 12g fat, 8g carbohydrate, 239mg sodium, 34mg cholesterol.

*You may substitute already baked or micro-baked squares of brownies. If brownies are cool, be sure caramel topping is at room temperature or warm so it will spread easily. If desired, before adding topping, heat brownies on High, covered with waxed paper, for about 15 seconds per brownie.

Dan Martin's Perspective On Dairy Future

BY LOU ANN GOOD

MANHEIM (Lancaster) —

When Dan Martin and his wife started farming in 1946, they were the laughingstock of the town. Their neighbors snickered, "Imagine two city kids trying to farm."

Within two years, neighbors were no longer laughing. Through hard work, dedication and an eagerness to learn, Dan proved that his lifelong dream was possible even though he had neither the background nor the financial backing to do it.

Today, Dan is first vice president of Atlantic Dairy Co-operative, the vice president of Dairy Council Inc. of Philadelphia, a board member of the executive committee of United Dairy Industries Association and the Mid-Atlantic Milk Market Association, the executive committee of UDIA, the Mid Atlantic Milk Market Association and the executive committee, and the Penmarva Board.

Recently Dan talked about the past and the future. Surrounded by his two farms of 168 acres that stretch across fertile Lancaster County land, Dan has a sense of satisfaction for the success he has obtained yet he grieves, "Someone like me wouldn't have a chance starting out today. Land is too expensive and a farmer doesn't get paid enough for commodities."

He asks, "Why all this push to preserve farmland? Even if the area has the highest producing, non-irrigation land in the nation, if you can't make a living on it, why preserve it?"

It isn't that he wants to see farm land disappear, but he believes efforts must be targeted in another direction. He insists, "We must reserve the farmer."

With fluctuating changes in the economy and new technology, where is dairy farming heading in the next ten years? With his perspective as a hands-on farmer and as one who helps shape the dairy industry through the many boards on which he participates, Dan hasn't given up hope that dairying may take a financial upswing.

First, he believes, that milk prices must be established at the market place. He said, "There is no problem getting prices guaranteed if all buyers pay the same. If we can get support from the milk marketing board, it will be easy to get support pricing."

He sees a good chance of getting support pricing since milk production is two percent below last year's amount in the Northeast and milk has a 10 percent increase in sales. Cheese, especially Italian cheeses, which are lower in fat and higher in moisture, account for the bulk of increase in sales.

While there is public concern for fat content and butterfat in dairy products, Dan believes that no stocks of cheese and nonfat milk show a positive sign. He said, "If people like your product and it's good for them, they're eat it."

"With milk prices $1 above 1988 prices, I think it will continue," he said.

"A dairyman's future hinges on the price of milk. Co-ops must take the lead and negotiate the prices," he said. With his involvement in co-op leadership, it is not surprising that Dan encourages strong participation in co-ops, but at the ahead of common sense and people make rash decisions."

In the future, Martin foresees more co-op mergers. "Buyers are bigger so co-ops must be larger to meet the demand."

While some members lament that individuality is lost in larger co-ops, Martin emphasizes there are advantages in a stronger bargaining base.

He's partial to the Atlantic Dairy Co-op. He said, "I think it's the best. It's been a strong co-op throughout the years and that's important to farmers because we need a strong financial base to negotiate in the marketplace."

He thinks there will be more litigations against producers who drop out. Although co-ops are reluctant to go through legal channels, Martin said, farmers must realize that a contract is binding and a penalty clause is enacted for breach of contract.

Changes can be made legally.

Dan Martin, who owns two Manheim farms would like to see society focus on preserving the farmer instead of farmland. He said, "If farmers get decent prices for their commodities, the land will stay in agriculture."

Will BST become part of the dairy man's future? Martin has mixed feelings. Recently he received a letter from a producer in Texas, cautioning against the hormone's release. He cited the example from a decade ago when estrogen was thought to be harmless since it was naturally found in women. Now studies have revealed many harmful side effects.

Martin maintains, "To manage the future, it's imperative to have the consumer's confidence. Unlike countries such as Russia, Czechoslovakia, and South Africa that have approved BST usage, the U.S. has an adequate supply and is not forced to take hasty action for approval."

Being cautious is necessary because, "No amount of advertising dollars can overcome negative publicity."

same time he doesn't believe in mandated participation.

He explained, "Freedom is more important than forcing members to join a co-op."

A co-op's success hangs on the management. He stresses, "The board of directors must take their responsibility seriously because management makes or breaks a co-op."

Dan encourages producers to watch their co-op's financial statement closely and to talk directly to the board when questions arise. He cautions, "Too often ideas get

He suggests switching at the the end of the contract if a producer is unsatisfied. He said, "Seldom does switching from co-op to co-op result in a financial benefit."

In the next decade, Dan believes business alternatives will increase and will lure more farmers off the farm. Options for land also will continue to entice farmers to sell out. Farm labor will be even more difficult to get. Taxes will increase.

According to Martin, new technology may cause the average farmer to increase his operation, but the family operation will continue to offer economic stability. He believes the family operation will remain strong because of high labor costs. "I can't see labor getting any cheaper. Youths are not taught to work and why should they if they can get paid more elsewhere."

At the same time Dan admits that a drastic drop in the economy could change everything. "If people are hungry and out of a job, they'll work on the farm, just so they can eat."

While the Amish with their large families have the labor to manage a farm, Martin predicts many of them will be moving to other counties. He said, "When it comes to selling farmland, Amish yield to high price just like any Englishman."

He predicts there will be less dairy farmers in Lancaster. "The milk shed will move west. But Pennsylvania, with an average cow herd of 54 and Lancaster with its average of 70 or more, will continue to be a high milk producing state in fluid milk sales, low fat and skim milk."

Martin said, "Farmers must be knowledgeable, but practical experience can be of more value than school knowledge."

Will BST become part of the dairy man's future? Martin has mixed feelings. Recently he received a letter from a producer in Texas, cautioning against the hormone's release. He cited the example from a decade ago when estrogen was thought to be harmless since it was naturally found in women. Now studies have revealed many harmful side effects.

Martin maintains, "To manage the future, it's imperative to have the consumer's confidence. Unlike countries such as Russia, Czechoslovakia, and South Africa that have approved BST usage, the U.S. has an adequate supply and is not forced to take hasty action for approval."

Being cautious is necessary because, "No amount of advertising dollars can overcome negative publicity."

He asks, "Although it would cause increased food supply, would it pay?" With the added costs of feed and the lifespan of a cow coupled with the public's perception, Martin doubts it.

He's disturbed that the public did not vote for tax change. "Although controversial, agriculture would benefit from tax changes. When the public could have shown their support to farmers by voting for the tax reform, they did not." Consequently he believes taxes will increase.

"School board assessments are not responsible or businesslike," he said. He favors going to neighborhood schools, which would result in less costs for busing. He asks, "Are athletic programs worth the cost?"

Crop wise, Martin sees a move toward more vegetable growing. "Vegetable farming requires a lot of cost and you need to hit the market at the right time or you don't make any money," he said. "If there's a glut, you can't get rid of it." Nonetheless when you hit the market at the right time, you can't make more money.

Farmers must be careful not to get over leveraged, Dan said. At the same time, he stresses, "You can't farm and not borrow. I've borrowed every year. But the amount you borrow determines success or failure. He believes a scale of debt to equity should be 50 percent or less debt to keep equity safe. "Of course interests rates affect the amount of debt. "When troubles loom, the sooner you sell out the better."

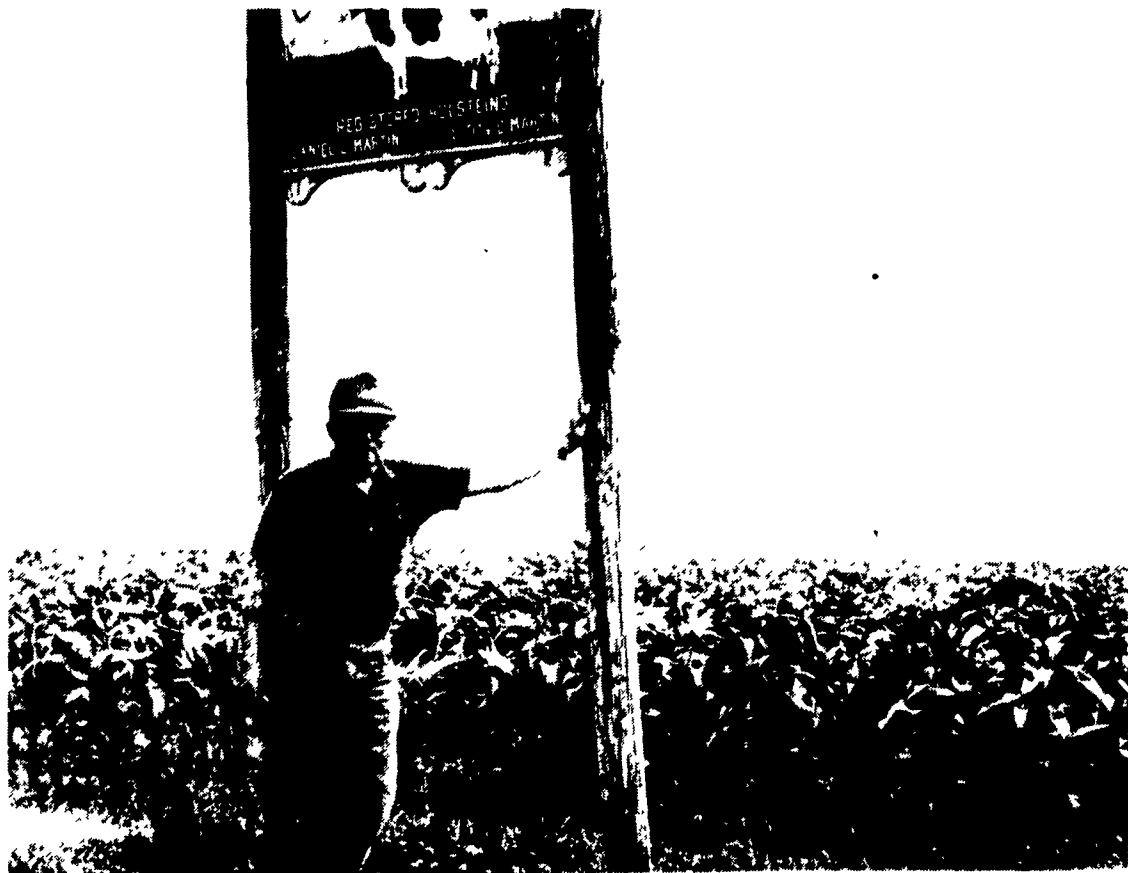

He doesn't believe farmers will continue to lose as many farms as in the past because both farmers and banks are more conservative.

"You must have a cash flow analysis. Never increase your debt load on land values. Your cash flow must serve indebtedness."

Lancaster farmers should not be in a race for equipment. He believes that simple living helped him to be successful.

When he first began farming, he had no financial backing. The

Martins borrowed everything.

"We weren't scared of failure, Dan recalled. We didn't have as many stresses then and farmers weren't losing their farms."

Then, farmers could let their feed bills go to the end of the year. We used cash flow to pay hired man. Every year we paid up. Although our income was peanuts, our costs were only a fraction of it. Today farmers must lay out so much money for crops, fertilizers and sprays before they get a crop. Costs have increased, but income has not increased."

Martin added, "We lacked fear and had determination. We worked until midnight."

For 13 years, Martin farmed on shares. In 1959 he bought the farm. After purchasing the farm, he said, "We got a sense of security, we did not have before, but we didn't know how we'd ever get the farm paid."

But Martin believes they had a lot going for them. He said, "We had our first hired man for 11 years. We raised tobacco and steers. The first year they purchased one cow for their own use of milk. Rather than pay a dollar to have it hauled, Dan walked it three miles home. The following year, he purchased 12 cows.

He compares today with then and said, "Now you can't start small in dairying. Milk companies won't bother to pick up milk."

Martin has a partnership with son Dave in their 168-acre dairy operation plus 50,000 broilers.

"All in all," Martin said, "The Lord's been good to us. We are in good health and have the ability to manage what we've undertaken."

He wishes other farmers could have the same chance for success. "Let's work to preserve the farmer," he said, "and push for higher prices on commodities."

Drilling A Hole Improves Frozen Corn On The Cob

ITHACA, N.Y. — By simply drilling a pencil-sized hole lengthwise through the center of an ear of corn, processors can keep the quality of frozen corn-on-the-cob much closer to fresh, a Cornell University food scientist has found. The hole allows corn-on-the-cob to be cooked more quickly before freezing. Rapid cooking preserves texture and flavor and more effectively deactivates enzymes in the cob that damage the kernels' flavor over time.

A major processor of frozen foods is engineering a large-scale version of the technique in hopes of making corn-on-the-cob a more popular, year-round addition to menus.

C.Y. Lee, a professor of food science and technology at Cornell's Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N.Y., was studying the chemistry of natural enzymes blamed for bad taste in corn, when he discovered the treatment, which preserves qualities of fresh sweet corn for months while reducing blanching times.

Cornell University is seeking a patent on the technique, which was reported July 11 at the International Conference on Technical Innovations in Freezing and Refrigeration of Fruits and Vegetables, in Davis, Calif.

"It takes only 3 to 4 minutes of cooking to maintain fresh corn's sweetness and tender texture — if you eat it right away," said Lee. "However, frozen corn-on-the-cob develops a cardboard-like, earthy smell after about six months, principally because it is blanched for less than 4 or 5 minutes before freezing. This blanching is enough to cook the corn, but not enough to deactivate natural enzymes that reactivate over time and cause a stale, rancid flavor."

Lee discovered that these enzymes are peroxidase and lipoxigenase and that they are found mostly on the outside portion of the cob and in the bottom sections of the corn kernels. In normal frozen-food processing, corn-on-the-cob cooks from the outside in. By the time enough heat activates the flavor-robbing enzymes in the outer cob and lower kernels, most of the corn is on its way to becoming mush.

"The cardboard flavor can be eliminated by cooking frozen corn for 13 to 14 minutes in boiling water, but then you get a soggy, watery product," the food scientist noted.

Theorizing that heating corn-on-the-cob in "stereo" would cook the corn faster, Lee improved on nature by drilling the holes. While Cornell's food science laboratory has almost every kind of food processing equipment, it didn't have a corn-cob drill, so Lee used a machine shop drill press. He bored pencil-sized holes through the length of corn ears, blanched the ears in scalding water for a range of times and froze them.

Every few months the food scientist assembled taste-testing panels to try the reheated frozen corn. Comparing corn from drilled ears (with shorter initial cooking times) to corn (cooked longer) from ears without holes, the taste testers said the texture of drilled-ear corn was closest to that of fresh corn-on-the-cob. They rated the overall taste of drilled-ear corn as slightly better than corn from ears without holes.

"Our sense of a food's quality involves taste, smell and the so-called mouth feeling — and that includes texture," Lee noted. "Except for better texture, there is not much difference in quality from drilling holes in the ears. Where we have succeeded is in improving processing techniques for frozen sweet corn-on-the-cob by cutting the blanching time by half."

Drilling holes in millions of corn cobs should be no problem for commercial frozen food processors, where machines cut ears to standard lengths, Lee said. One Rochester, N.Y., food processor, Comstock Foods Inc., is jointly working with Lee. Other research support came from New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

There's just one problem, according to Lee. His test panels liked corn when it was sliced from ears with holes before serving. But the same corn, when served on hollow ears, was rated lower.

"I think there's some sort of psychological factor at work," he said.

Vision And Driving

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — As we age there are some normal changes in our eyes. It is common for people who experience these changes to become concerned about their independence and mobility, particularly their continued ability to drive a car.

According to Dr. Barbara Davis, Aging Specialist at Penn State University, it is unlikely that most older adults will need to give up their cars. But she stresses it is essential to have a thorough eye exam at least yearly by a qualified optometrist or ophthalmologist, as vision problems do increase with age.

As you grow older, one or more of the following vision changes could occur and affect your driving:

- * difficulty in changing focus for near and far objects;
- * need for additional light to see clearly;
- * greater susceptibility to glare from sun and headlights;
- * slower reaction time;
- * less ability to see to the side when looking ahead;

Driving tips:

- * Wear proper glasses for day and night driving. Use good quality sunglasses in sunlight; do not wear tinted lenses or sunglasses at night.
- * Avoid glasses with wide temple pieces (they impair side vision).
- * Keep your glasses clean.
- * Watch ahead, beside, and behind you as you drive. Use the rear view mirror frequently.
- * Drive at the approximate speed of the traffic around you.

* Drive a car with a clear windshield. Tinted windshields can reduce the amount of light entering the eye. A clear windshield and use of good sunglasses in sunlight is preferable.

* Keep headlights adjusted and keep headlights, taillights, and windshield (inside and outside) clean.

* Always fasten safety belts and shoulder straps.

Drugs and driving.

Know the side effects of any drug you take before getting behind the wheel. The following drugs can affect your vision when driving; non-prescription cold and sinus remedies, sleeping pills, tranquilizers, sedatives, pain killers, some prescription drugs, and even extensive use of aspirin.

Regional 4-H Fashion Revue Parade

BY JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — In a colorful parade of fashion they came — plaid kilts and hot pink vests, from breezy T-shirts to cozy winter coats, shimmering gowns and cropped cotton pants.

Though most looked jaunty and at ease, each knew that beyond the lights of the stage, practiced eyes of judges observed this last hurdle of competition. And, when the results were announced at the Regional 4-H Fashion Revue, held July 18 at St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, 27 4-H sewing enthusiasts had claimed either a coveted gold or blue honors ribbon for their achievements.

Gold winners in the junior division were Kristi Johnston, Adams County; Seth Paul, Dauphin; and Amy Rohrer, Kara Regitz, and Eunice Clark, Lancaster. Junior division blue honors ribbons went to Kim Orris, Cumberland County; Lisa Stahl and Heather Gardner, Franklin; and Melanie Bushong and Terri Seibert, Lebanon.

Blue ribbon winners in the senior division are first alternate, Jesse Romberger, Dauphin County; second alternate, Tanya Petry, Adams; and Sarah Stets, Cumberland. Also, Wendy Pierce and Lori Brandt, Lebanon County; Marlene Enck and Linda Boose, Lancaster; and Carrie Davies, Julie Hughes, and Susan Marsteller, York.

The senior gold award winners are Stacy Reaver, Adams County; Sarah Garman, Cumberland; Wendy Debnam, York; and Alissa Hooper, Colleen Klazas, Kim Rohrer, and Becky Badger, Lancaster. These seven senior regional winners will represent the Capital 4-H Region at the State Fashion Revue, Tuesday, August 8, at the Eisenhower Auditorium, University Park, Penn State. This year's Capital Region winners created entries which include dresses, suits and an evening gown.

Kim Rohrer chose a soft rose corduroy for her classic dress, featuring long sleeves and slightly gathered waist, accented with a gathered cummerbund. A lace collar and gold-tone-edged pearl buttons add graceful touches. Kim will be a sophomore at Hempfield High School, and enjoys playing the piano, art, field hockey and volleyball.

A classic Victorian dress of linen and lace, with cap sleeves, extended waist front and back darts, and lace motif applique on the bodice won Alissa Hooper the gold award in her ninth year of 4-H sewing. A 1989 graduate of Garden Spot High School, where she was student council president, Alissa plans to major in home economics at Hood College.

Becky Badger's three-piece outfit topped gray-black tweed trousers with a black wool gabardine short jacket, and a geometric print blouse to complete the ensemble.

A Pendleton wool plaid skirt and off-white wool jacket both mix and match for Wendy Debnam. Pewter buttons with a sheep imprint add a touch of another of her interests. She will be a senior at Southwestern High School this fall.

Colleen Klazas topped her cream and charcoal flared bias skirt with a charcoal wool, long-sleeve jacket, then added a flash of color with a rust-colored blouse. A belt of cording and buttons helps coordinate the colors of the ensemble. Colleen will be a freshman at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, with plans for a career in fashion merchandising.

Keep Food Safe During Power Failures

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Despite all our technological advances, we are still subject to the whims of nature, as recent storms and the resulting power failures demonstrated. County offices of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service (MCES) were deluged with phone calls from consumers wondering how to keep food cold in refrigerators and freezers and how to know which foods were safe to consume after hours or days without electricity.

And while we all hope we don't experience such fierce or destructive weather again soon, thunder-and-lightning storms are common during the summer months and often cause local power failures. It makes sense, therefore, to be prepared, says Dr. Mark A. Kantor, an MCES nutrition specialist, who offers the following advice.

"First of all, purchase thermometers for the freezer and refrigerator so you can keep track of the temperature in case the power fails. The thermometers should be sturdy and designed specifically for this use. Many hardware stores and supermarkets carry them."

If your electricity is cut off, Dr. Kantor advises calling the power company to find out how long you can expect to be without electricity. Or listen to your radio for announcements from the power company.

"If it's only a few hours, you don't have to do anything... except avoid opening the refrigerator and freezer doors. But if the power failure is expected to last longer than that, you'll need to take some steps to ensure the safety of your food supply," he says.

If you're lucky enough to have a full freezer, Kantor notes, you can expect food to remain frozen for two days. A half-full freezer will keep food frozen for about one day, although you may be able to extend this time by grouping packages together so they retain the cold more effectively.

You can also help keep food frozen longer by adding dry ice to your freezer. Twenty-five pounds of dry ice should hold a 10-cubic-foot full freezer below freezing for three to four days. If the freezer is half full, the same amount of ice will keep it stable for two to three days.

If possible, find out where you can get dry ice before you need it. Utility companies often distribute dry ice free of charge during extended power outages. Listen to your radio for announcements regarding distribution points.

Also, learn how to handle dry ice properly.

"Never touch it with your bare hands," Kantor stresses. "It can freeze your skin quite badly. Instead, transport it in a cardboard box that you can place directly in the freezer, or wear heavy gloves and use tongs when handling it." Keep the dry ice away from food items or place a piece of cardboard between the ice and food so items don't stick to it.

(When dry ice vaporizes, it drives out the surrounding oxygen, so don't stick your head into the freezer and breathe the vapors.)

After a power failure, food will usually keep for four to six hours in a refrigerator, depending upon how warm your kitchen is. If power will be out for longer than that, you may want to add block ice to the refrigerator. Don't use dry ice; it can freeze refrigerated items.

You can help insulate your refrigerator and/or freezer by covering it with a blanket, which will help prevent the loss of cold air. Just make sure you don't cover the air vents in case the power comes back on.

Once power has been restored, it's time to assess the damage. The following guidelines will help you decide which items to keep and which to throw out.

If ice crystals are visible on frozen food and its temperature has remained at 40 degrees or below, it is safe to refreeze, although the quality of some items may suffer. If the food has thawed completely but still feels cold, cook it right away and then serve or refreeze.

In the case of meat, Kantor recommends using it in a recipe that allows for well-done rather than rare preparation. For example, cut a roast into thin strips and stir-fry, or use ground beef for spaghetti sauce rather than rare hamburgers.

Some foods can tolerate less time/temperature abuse than others. For example, fresh meats, poultry, lunch meats, hot dogs, eggs and milk should be discarded if they have been subjected to temperature of 40 degrees or higher for more than two hours; bacteria that cause food poisoning can multiply to unsafe levels under these conditions.

Fruits and vegetables, on the other hand, can be cooked and served as long as there is no yeasty smell, sliminess or evidence of mold. Juices can be used, provided they look and smell acceptable, and well-wrapped hard cheeses, butter and margarine can be kept unless mold or rancid odors develop.

Arabian Gelding Is Prize In Raffle

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — SS Samisands, the newest resident at Wishful Acres here, will be awarded to one lucky horse lover during the Devon Horse Show on August 5. The registered Arabian gelding is the prize in a raffle sponsored by the Pennsylvania Arabian Horse Association.

Nothing Runs Like a Deere®

Be Creative And Economical With Summer Sandwiches

NEWARK, DE — Trying to come up with new ideas for quick, economical summer meals that are tasty and nutritious? A few easy variations on an old favorite could be just the thing to spice up that summer menu.

About 200 years have passed since the Earl of Sandwich gave his name to what has become an all-American food idea that's a popular choice for any meal, says Claudia Holden, state Extension coordinator of the Expanded Food and Nutrition Program (EFNEP).

"Sandwiches are easy to prepare, and they can be both nutritious and delicious," Holden says. "You can serve them open face, in pita bread pockets, grilled, baked or in hundreds of other ways."

The variety of breads available for sandwiches is limitless, Holden notes. Different shapes include pita pockets, kaiser rolls, bagels, tortillas or rice cakes. Rye, cinnamon, raisin, oatmeal, herb, cheese and onion are just a few of the many available flavors.

Enriched and whole-grain breads provide you with energy, vitamins and iron, and most are low in fat, Holden says. For extra dietary fiber, use whole-grain breads such as whole wheat, rye or pumpnickel. Keep in mind that not all dark breads are whole grain, so read labels to be sure you're purchasing the product you want, Holden advises.

Many breads come in a variety of sizes to suit your appetite. "Choose regular slices of bread for hearty sandwiches that can be filled, dipped in a batter and sautéed until brown," suggests Holden. "These are especially good for Sunday brunches or late suppers."

If you're in the mood for a small snack sandwich, try snack-size pumpnickel or small pita pockets. Thinly sliced bread is perfect for small canapes and finger sandwiches. Cut them into various shapes and designs with cookie cutters or a knife, and serve them when entertaining.

Bread crusts help keep sandwiches from drying out, so leave them on all but fancy sandwiches, Holden says.

"Sandwich fillings can be as creative as your imagination will allow," Holden notes. Select foods that go well together, and consider family preferences.

Try chopped hard-cooked eggs combined with one or more of the following ingredients to satisfy individual tastes: onion, celery, green pepper, bean sprouts, lettuce, grated carrot, chopped raw spinach or grated cheese.

Holden says health-conscious family members will find much to choose from in sandwich fillings. The suggestions listed below are just a few examples of combinations that are lower in fat and sodium than many traditional fillings:

- * flaked cooked fish or water-packed tuna mixed with a little herb-seasoned tomato sauce;

- * chopped lean meat or poultry mixed with shredded cabbage, minced onion and plain low-fat yogurt, and seasoned with cayenne pepper and dry mustard;

- * chopped cooked lean pork mixed with celery, onions and plain low-fat yogurt.

Many condiments used to flavor sandwiches, including catsup, mustard, tartar sauce, chili sauce, pickles and olives, increase the sodium content of the sandwich, Holden says. In addition, spreads such as mayonnaise, margarine, butter and cream cheese add fat and calories but few vitamins or minerals.

Instead of these traditional condiments and spreads, Holden suggests the following low-fat, low-sodium add-ons for moistness, flavor and variety:

- * lettuce leaves, spinach leaves or other salad greens;
- * drained crushed pineapple;
- * sliced apple, cucumber, onion, radish, tomato or zucchini;
- * bean or alfalfa sprouts;
- * low-fat cottage cheese mixed in a blender;
- * plain low-fat yogurt;

- * shredded carrots.

For bag lunches, pack these items separately and add them to sandwiches at lunchtime.

There are many nutritious, tasty and low-cost ingredients out there waiting to be added to your summer sandwiches. "So the next time you think sandwich," Holden says, "explore the waterfront. Don't stop with peanut butter and jelly."

To get you started, Holden offers the following recipe for a nutritious and easy-to-prepare combination of beef and vegetables:

Beef 'n' Slaw Pockets
Yield: 4 servings, 1 sandwich each per serving:
calories 175
cholesterol 25 milligrams total fat 6 grams sodium 69 milligrams saturated fatty acids 1 gram

Ingredients:
1 cup lean beef, cooked and cut in thin strips
1 cup cole slaw
1 medium tomato, sliced into 8 slices
2 6-inch loaves whole-wheat pita bread
* Drain cole slaw.
* Toss coleslaw with beef strips in a bowl.
* Cut pita bread in halves.
* Place one-fourth of filling in each bread half.
* Top with tomato slices.

Garbage Burying U.S.

What a waste! The United States is burying itself in garbage.

We generate about 400,000 tons of garbage every day—some 150 million tons of trash a year. What's more we're running out of places to put it. Costs are rising too. In some places it costs more than $100 a ton to dump garbage at a landfill.

And although product packaging is part of the problem, it can also be part of the solution.

In a nationwide poll conducted by the Gallup Organization, consumers were asked, "If you knew a certain food or beverage container could not be recycled, what would you do?" More than half said they would switch to a container that can be recycled.

So, to help solve the solid waste crisis, Americans can shop smarter. You can consider the recyclability of a package when you make a purchase. For example, glass and aluminum are recyclable and can easily be made into new containers. So, when given the choice, purchase a product in a recyclable container.

Next, Americans can take part in recycling programs. In more than 600 cities and towns across the USA there are curb-side collection programs. Many citizens are asking officials to develop recycling systems suitable to their neighborhoods. Companies can help, too. One glass manufacturer, for instance, paid recyclers more than $20 million for 391,000 tons of used glass—the equivalent of more than a billion-and-a-half containers.

The Glass Packaging Institute, the national trade association of glass container manufacturers, has created a leaflet and a video cassette to help individuals and communities develop recycling programs to help solve their solid waste problems. For additional information write: Glass Packaging Institute, 1801 K Street, N.W., S-1105-L, Washington, DC 20006.

Citizen Development Grant Awarded

WARREN (Warren Co.) — A $1,000 grant has been awarded to Dianna Sleeman to further citizenship development and volunteerism for 4-H in Pennsylvania. The grant was awarded as part of the 4-H Salute to Excellence Program sponsored by RJR Nabisco.

Sleeman was awarded the grant after her participation last March in the National 4-H Salute to Excellence Program, honoring the top 4-H volunteer from each state and U.S. territory. She will use the grant to develop a program, Exploring Citizenship. It is designed to help young people age 9-18 years to better understand themselves, their rights and their local government and to develop skills necessary to make sound decisions.

This program also includes exploring individual and community heritage and investigating career options. "The future of our democracy is dependent on young people learning and practicing good citizenship," she says.

The plan was formulated during the Salute Conference, in which participants learned to use government effectively and developed their leadership and communications skills to use in local 4-H activities.

The grants were arranged by National 4-H Council, a not-for-profit organization that uses private resources to enhance and support the 4-H program nationwide. 4-H is the youth education program of the Cooperative Extension System of the state land grant universities and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Kentucky 4-H'er Lena Mallory of Lexington, left, checks the 4-H Exchange Schedule with Adams County 4-H'er Jacki Sterner of Gettysburg. Eleven teens and three adults from the Lexington area are being hosted by Adams County 4-H teens and adults for six days.

No small change when ordinary cows become SURPASS™ cows

When you feed your cows improved Surpass™ liquid supplement, there's potential for more than nickel and dime profit increases.

With the unique combination of natural, high bypass protein and NPN, Surpass helps your cows increase their potential for more milk production.

The higher nutrient density of Surpass also provides equal nutrition to dry supplements but in far less volume. That means your cows have room for more fiber. More fiber means increased potential for more butterfat and higher milk premiums.

More milk, more butterfat and in many instances lower cost than comparable dry supplements—all of that means a better dollar return on your feed investment with Surpass.

For details, ask for the new 12-page booklet, "See the Difference..." and learn how easy and profitable it can be to change ordinary cows into SURPASS cows.

with flip-up beaver tail

Compare our quality and price!

Optional deck over the neck is 7 1/2' x 8'

The FLIP-UP BEAVERTAIL raises and lowers in seconds -- slide out ramps are stored under the beavertail. The Hillsboro Flatbed features a full 96" deck width which is more value than the competition.

The Hillsboro Flatbed is available in two styles; the 20' and 24' trailer with standard neck, and the 28', 30' and 32' trailer with heavy duty neck.

VERSATILE — RUGGED — RELIABLE and REASONABLY PRICED!

The Hillsboro Flatbed Trailer with flip-up beavertail can be the one trailer that means lower cost for you. Here's why!

VERSATILITY! That's what makes a Hillsboro trailer such a good investment. With the beavertail down it's an excellent trailer for moving wheeled equipment. Flip the beavertail up and it adds an extra four feet of deck space for hauling hay and other bulky loads.

HERE'S WHAT HILLSBORO QUALITY MEANS - All Hillsboro trailers are manufactured in precise jigs and fixtures which assures excellent alignment of axles, a better pulling trailer, a level and square trailer.

HILLSBORO WORKMANSHIP INCLUDES- Exceptional weld quality, material that is chemically cleaned, two coats of high quality paint, material strength engineered into the best flat-bed value.

NOW IN STOCK... 12 DIFFERENT HILLSBORO TRAILERS TO CHOOSE FROM

ALUMINUM GOOSENECK TRAILERS

20' Gooseneck Trailer

A versatile, lightweight, Eby aluminum stock trailer is built to provide years of maintenance free service. An Eby trailer is custom built to fit your individual hauling needs - No mass production! We use only quality components and strong alloy aluminum to manufacture what may be the last trailer you'll ever buy.

- LIGHTWEIGHT - Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers. Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload.
- MAINTENANCE - Eby aluminum trailers won't rust. Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs.
- DURABILITY - Eby trailers are built tough. Quality components and 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a live-stock trailer.

Champion Livestock Sale Date Set For Schuylkill County Fair

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN (Schuylkill Co.) — The 4-H and F.F.A. Champion Livestock Sale will highlight the Saturday night schedule of events of the 1989 Schuylkill County Fair. The sale begins at 6:00 p.m. on August 12.

This sale is the culmination of much hard work by the young people who undertook a steer, hog, or lamb project. The animals are required to be sold at the fair auction. Bids generally exceed market price which rewards the 4-H or

F.F.A. youth for their many hours spent training and grooming their animals for the show. Area businessmen and other generous individuals support the sale with their bids and make it a success.

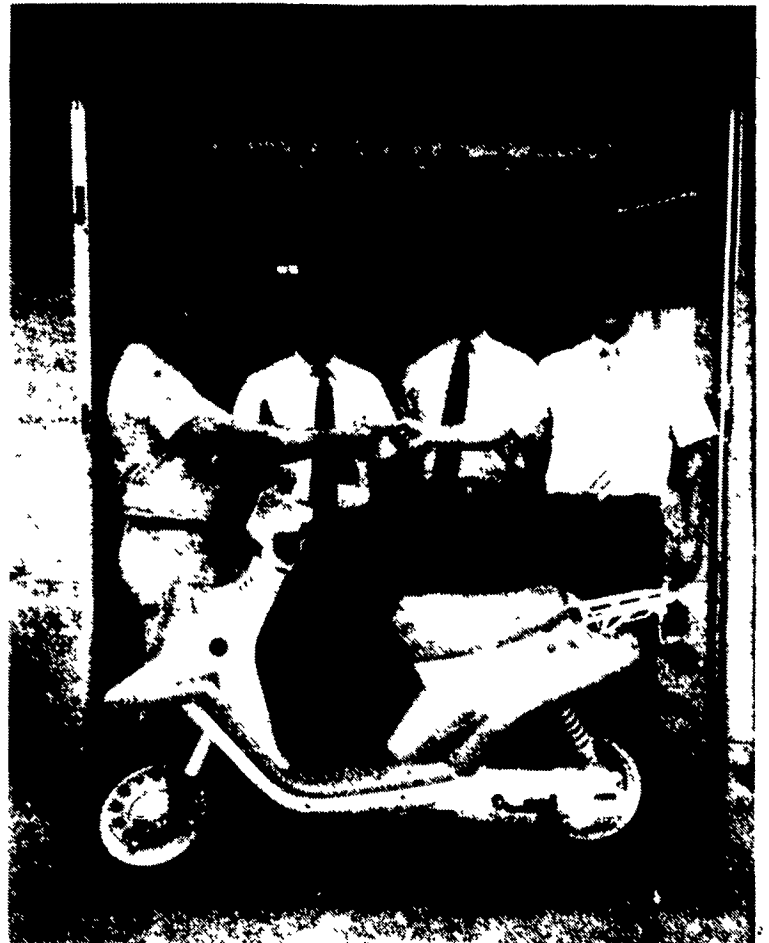

As a preview to the sale, a "Parade of Champions" will be conducted Friday, August 11, at 7:00 p.m. Owners and experts will be on hand to explain why these champions were judged best of the fair.

Judy Flynn, Fair Livestock Co-Superintendent, says, "Every year since the rebirth of the Schuylkill County Fair, we have received higher bids and set new records at the 4-H and F.F.A. livestock sale. The August 12 sale at the new fairgrounds in Summit Station promises to be the best champion livestock sale ever!"

The 1989 Schuylkill County Fair will be held August 7 through August 12 and features a wide range of amusements and entertainment in addition to the livestock events.

Lebanon County 4-H Auction Set

Delaware State Fair To Feature Water Quality Booths

NEWARK, DE — University of Delaware Cooperative Extension is again planning a tent full of fun and education at the Delaware State Fair, July 20-29.

Groundwater safety will be a key feature in this year's tent. A computer game will test visitors' knowledge of the subject. A groundwater model will graphically demonstrate the course that water takes from fields and homes into the underground holding areas.

"Groundwater quality is a national issue of wide public interest," says Tom Williams, University of Delaware Extension agricultural engineer. "Fair goers would do well to stop by the tent and get more information on protecting groundwater quality. Specialists will be there to answer questions and concerns about water quality."

Williams says the tent will include exhibits on where to get your water tested for nitrates and bacteria, water treatment systems, non-profit source pollution and household hazardous waste disposal.

Also featured will be a home greenhouse display staffed by Delaware Master Gardeners. The gardeners are planning to showcase nine unusual plants in addition to displaying a water conservation landscape.

Food is always an intriguing topic, especially at the Extension tent. Visitors can test their knowledge of food safety at an electric quizboard, while children participate in a ball toss.

As an added bonus for tent visitors, extension will give away free tickets to a University of Delaware Football game daily.

Extension is celebrating its 75th Anniversary this year. To celebrate this important anniversary, a collection of photos tracing Extension's history will be exhibited in the 4-H building.

Produce Prices Strong At New Maryland Auction

CHELTEHAM, MD — Produce wholesale auction sales at the Southern Maryland Regional Farmers Market got off to a strong start on Tuesday, July 18th, with eager buyers quickly snapping up offerings from sellers.

Gross sales for the first day of auctions at the facility located on U.S. Route 301 totaled $4735.63. A crowd of more than 100 people, including 39 buyers and 16 sellers, was on hand to initiate the wholesale phase of the new market which three weeks ago began retail sales three times each week.

Response from the public to retail sale operations has been an overwhelming success, with average customer traffic on weekdays numbering 2,000 and as high as 10,000 on Saturdays.

corn, cantaloupes, watemelons, tomatoes, squash, peppers, blackberries, blueberries, and cherries.

Auction sales will be held starting at 11 A.M. every Tuesday and Thursday during the season. Buyers and sellers must register in advance with marketmasters Martin Jones and Dan Martinek. Sales are held under roof with a drive-through lane for truckload lots and a stationary lane for items displayed on dollies for inspection.

Growers offering produce came from seven Maryland counties (Anne Arundel, Calvert, Caroline, Charles, Montgomery, Prince George's, and St. Mary's). One was from out of state. Buyers came from six Maryland counties (Anne Arundel, Calverts., Charles, Montgomery, Prince George's, Washington), Baltimore City, Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, and Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. Several buyers were representing major regional supermarket chains.

A summary of average prices paid on opening day showed: sweet corn (pick-up truck loads) $2.53 per dozen, crates of five dozen $12.00; cucumbers per box $7.09; peppers — large, per box $12.52; summer squash per box $6.39; zucchini squash per box $9.00; tomatoes — medium, per box $12.84; cantaloupes, eight-count boxes $7.99; watermelons — medium $2.00 each; peaches per box $13.25; blueberries per flat $10.38; blackberries per flat $16.50; and cherries per flat $8.00.

Buyers and producers wanting detailed information on operations of the wholesale auction market should contact marketmasters Martin Jones and Dan Martinek at 301/372/1066 (outside of Maryland) or 800/533-FARM (in Maryland).

Economist Updates Livestock Market Outlook

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Lou Moore, Penn State agricultural economist, says it's time to revise the numbers. It's not surprising that many put little faith in some of the economic projections. Cattle slaughter is a good example. As 1989 began it was projected that beef production would drop seven percent in 1989. This led to price projections of $80 or more per hundredweight in the second and third quarters of 1989. But drought on the high plains and in Western Iowa and Nebraska forced more cattle into feedlots at an earlier age.

Cattle slaughter and beef production began increasing seasonally in April after first quarter production fell to the lowest level since 1983. Larger feedlot marketings accounted for most of the increased marketings and pushed cattle prices down about $5 from the record high levels reached in March. Instead of declining seven percent in the second quarter, it appears that beef output will be up about five percent during the quarter. During the remainder of 1989 beef production, based on the number of cattle on feed, should drop two to four percent, according to Moore. If this projection stands, beef production for the year will be just one percent less than in 1988 — a far cry from the six month old projection that beef output would be down seven percent.

The adjustment in pork output is small compared to what was expected six months ago. Earlier it appeared that pork production would increase one percent over 1988 when production was up nine percent from the previous year. But hog producers have been hurt by the extended period of low prices and are cutting their herds a little more than earlier expected. Pork output for 1989 is now expected to be the same as in 1988. Output was up slightly in the first half and should drop one to four percent in the third and fourth quarters.

Losses to hog producers have been substantial since September 1988. In April, producers were $12 per hundredweights short of covering all of their costs and were just barely able to cover the cost of the feeder pigs and feed. Prices have strengthened in recent weeks as the level of marketings dropped. Even though producers are responding to unfavorable returns by reducing the number of sows in their herds, there is little evidence that a major herd liquidation is under way. Pork output should drop from year ago levels in the third and fourth quarters.

Moore says hog prices should remain high enough to keep producers near the breakeven point after paying cash expenses. Feed prices in the second half will determine the level of profitability of hog production. The Eastern Corn Belt has been plagued with too much rain while the Western Corn Belt is again faced with drought. Based on acreage intended to be planted to corn and assuming normal weather, the 1989 corn crop should have been near 7.8 billion bushels. A crop this size would reduce feed costs to the livestock sector but it is too early to plan on a crop that large.

Much of the corn was planted very late. On June 18th only 83 percent of Pennsylvania's corn crop was planted compared to 97 percent at the same time a year earlier. Across the country, corn planting was 96 percent complete, three percentage points behind normal. About 75 percent of the soybean acreage was planted, about eight points behind normal. Weather is going to play a key role in crop yields in 1989 just as it did a year ago.

There are lots of exciting things happening in the meat industry. The exports of U.S. sheep increased 315 percent last year and most of the shipments went to Mexico. U.S. imports of lamb and mutton, mostly from Australia and New Zealand increased 16 percent last year. Despite all the publicity about the European Economic Community hormone ban on U.S. beef, exports of beef and veal in January-February were up 37 percent. For the year, exports will probably increase eight percent with 74 to 80 percent of our beef going to Japan. Recent research indicates the formula fed veal industry is a $2.3 billion industry, comparable in size to the sheep industry.

Poplar Hill Field Day Planned

COLLEGE PARK, MD — The annual Poplar Hill Facility field day begins at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, August 8.

Scientists at the Poplar Hill Facility conduct agronomic and horticultural research, including plant disease control methods and agricultural drainage systems.

Field day registration begins at 9 a.m. Tours of research field plots start at 9:30 and continue approximately every 15 minutes until 10:30 a.m. This year's tour stops include:

RCMA Establishes Six-Member Task Force To Investigate Dairy Issues

BATAVIA, NY — The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA), a 22,000 member dairy farmer organization, appointed six people to a "Dairy Issues" investigative task force during a meeting of the RCMA Board of Directors, Friday, July 7, 1989.

Dick Langworthy of Agri-Mark, Inc. in Methuen, MA will chair the group assigned to look at such dairy issues as the value of manufacturing milk, producer price alignment among Federal Milk Marketing Orders, and long-term RCMA pricing strategies. Other members of the RCMA Task Force include: Clyde Rutherford, Dairy Lea Cooperative, Inc. in Syracuse, NY; Mike Donovan, Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative in Syracuse, NY; Jim Fraher, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative in Southampton, PA; Joe Hess, RCMA Region 17 Director from Mt. Joy, PA; and Mert Evans, Allied Federated Cooperative. The group will report back to the RCMA Board of Directors on August 11, 1989.

According to RCMA President, Bill Zuber, "RCMA is doing everything possible to ensure a profitable future for dairy farmers and the thousands of other people employed directly or indirectly in the dairy industry here in the Northeast." Zuber stated that these six people will devote as much time as needed to look into some of the long-standing problems facing the Northeast dairy industry.

"We are trying to assist the milk dealers here in the Northeast so that they may, in turn, be able to help our members and keep them in the dairy business," explained

The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency is a 22,000-member organization run by and for dairy farmers in 11

Northeastern states. RCMA collects, from the marketplace, a Class I fluid milk differential over the minimum Class I price set by the Government, and RCMA returns this money in the form of "Over-Order Premiums" to its farmer-members.

Weather Dominates Market Price Moves

NEWARK, DE — "Corn, wheat and soybean prices have been driven by weather this past month," says Carl German, University of Delaware Extension crops marketing specialist.

"The Eastern corn belt has been inundated with too much rain in contrast to parts of the Western corn belt," he says, "which are in need of timely rains for corn that has reached the tasseling stage."

German says severe drought conditions do not seem likely during the present cropping season. However, portions of the growing region may experience reduced yields due to a lack of timely rains, while the excessive rain in the Eastern corn belt has reduced yield prospects in that region.

"As in most weather markets," he says, "only time will determine the eventual outcome for crop yields. But farmers still need to have marketing strategies."

Considering the general condition of crop development in the United States, the smart thing to do now is to place further 1989 crop sales on hold, German says. The weather during the month of July and possibly August will help determine the eventual direction of crop prices.

Trading ranges for corn, wheat and soybeans are likely to be within 20 to 30 cents of their current levels. December corn is expected to trade from $2.50 to $2.80, November soybeans from $6.50 to $7.00, and September wheat from $3.95 to $4.15 per bushel.

"The bottom line in the event of timely rains in the Midwest," the specialist says, "is to expect these prices to break toward the bottom or below these trading ranges. If the rains don't come, then we'll see higher prices."

Regarding the small-grain harvest, German says if wheat is harvested and stored, producers may want to consider protecting the price risk with September put options or a hedged position in the futures market. This is because the spring and Canadian wheat crop, which will be harvested in September, is said to be in great shape.

Another factor to consider, which may prove to be price-depressing for wheat, is the wheat catalog, which is scheduled to be released when the national average wheat price hits the $4.10 per bushel mark, German says.

Finally he notes that producers with profitable positions in options may want to consider offsetting those positions. But producers must keep current with market trends to make their best decisions.

"One can be sure that seizing upon any opportunity to make additional cash sales in the present market will require keeping abreast of daily market developments," German says.

For further information on marketing your crops, call Carl German at 451-1317.

Putting Wheat Into Beef Rations

STATE COLLEGE (Centre) — Because of the increasing price of corn, farmers may need to find alternative, price-competitive sources of energy to put in beef cattle rations. Using wheat is one such option. In addition, prices for the new wheat crop are being reduced because of shriveled kernels and low bushel weights. The following are some specific management procedures suggested by John Comerford, Penn State Extension beef specialist, to make the most efficient use of wheat.

Wheat is generally higher in protein than corn, but has a slightly lower energy value. Based on a corn price of $3.50 per bushel for corn, wheat, as an alternative energy feed, is worth $3.62 per bushel.

A conservative value for comparing corn to wheat used for energy is to first divide the price of corn per hundred-weight by .97. This is the comparable price of wheat per hundred-weight. Secondly, a ration for 700 pound feeder cattle, which has wheat as 50 percent of the grain, will require four percent less soybean meal to meet protein requirements, if corn silage or other high energy roughage makes up at least 15 percent of the diet. This is a significant savings in light of current soybean meal prices.

Wheat should provide no more than 50 percent of the grain in the diet because of palatability problems at higher levels. Beef cattle have a higher incidence of lactic acidosis when fed rations containing over 60 percent wheat. Buffers to reduce palatability and acidosis problems can be added at the rate of .4 pounds of sodium bicarbonate per head to the daily ration. Other management recommendations include:

- Bring up to full feed over a period of at least three weeks, which is slower than all corn rations.

- Get fiber levels in the feed to at least six percent. This can be accomplished with silage, haylage, or alfalfa hay at 10-20 percent of the diet.

- Dry roll or coarse grind the wheat for best results. Whole wheat is 12-20 percent less efficient than rolled wheat.

For swine, 100 pounds of wheat can replace 98 pounds of corn and up to two pounds of soybean oil meal. Hogs seem to perform equally well on wheat or corn.

Allentown Horse Judging Team

The Allentown horse judging team traveled to the Virginia Horse Center in Lexington, VA, on July 6-9, to compete in Region 15 Arabian Youth Judging. The team was ranked high overall team. Nicole Wright of New Egypt placed first individually, Diane Dancer of New Egypt placed third, Dawn Doidge of Upper Freehold placed tenth, and Allison Cottrell of Upper Freehold placed eleventh. The team competed against teams from Region, 15 which consists of a five-state area. They judged three conformation classes and two performance classes of Arabian horses and also gave three sets of reasons. The team traveled 400 miles on Thursday, practiced all day Friday for the contest to compete on Saturday, and returned on Sunday. They were accompanied on their trip by Pat Cottrell. The team was coached by Mrs. and Mr. Roszel.

The meeting of the Conodoguinet Sheep Club met July 19 at 7 p.m. at the home of Eric and Corey Berkheimer. Mr. Duff George and Mr. Nathan Mooney put on a sheep dog demonstration. They worked the sheep with three dogs. Mr. George explained to the club what the dogs were doing while Mr. Mooney used a whistle, bought from England, to guide the dogs.

The club then went to the Monroe Township building. The Shipensburg fair starts Sunday, July 23. The market animals are to be in by 12 noon. They will be weighed in between 12 and 2 p.m.

The project books are due at the Carlisle Fair. The round-up for the beef and sheep club will be held Saturday, August 12, at the fair grounds. There will be free refreshments before the sale starting at 7 p.m.

The next meeting will be held August 11 at the Carlisle Fair Grounds.

...THE AXIAL-FLOW SPECIALISTS

Axial-Flow Combine

DIFFERENT and BETTER from the inside out

HERE'S THE INSIDE DIFFERENCE:

- 1 An impeller on the front of the rotor draws the crop and air into the rotor and threshing cage.
- 2 The single rotor threshes and separates the crop. Speed of rotation can be adjusted on the go.
- 3 Torque-sensing rotor drive automatically regulates belt tension in relation to load.
- 4 Three-section concaves can be removed and reinstalled by one man in less than 30 minutes. Small-wire and large-wire concaves are available to match different crops. Clearance is easily adjusted with a ratchet handle.
- 5 A variety of separating grates are available to best handle almost any crop you'll be harvesting.
- 6 Augers move the grain smoothly, positively to the cleaning sieves. Grain can't bunch up, even on steep hillsides.
- 7 Opposed-action adjustable sieves remove chaff from the grain.
- 8 Advanced-design cleaning fan with variable speed drive removes any chaff and foreign material that remains.
- 9 Positive discharge beater propels straw rearward to the straw spreaders. (Straw chopper is optional.)
- 10 Wide spread twin-rotor straw spreaders distribute discharge material uniformly and can be removed in seconds for windrowing material.

Why Axial-Flow is superior. On conventional combines, the grain passes between the cylinder and concave only once. Consequently, the threshing action is severe. But with Axial-Flow, grain is threshed several times — repeatedly, but gently — as it spirals around the single, large diameter rotor and passes through the threshing cage. Multiple threshing plus gentle threshing results in less cracked grain, less dockage at the elevator and top price for every bushel.

Centrifugal force replaces straw walkers. Axial-Flow eliminates the need for straw walkers — a substantial source of grain loss with conventional combines. Consequently, the more grain you grow, the more grain you'll save with the more efficient Axial-Flow system.

Reel Rain, American Made Quality Irrigation

Imitated but not duplicated. Many imports are copying the proven design of Hobbs Reel Rain Irrigation systems. What they can't copy is the years of experience that have gone into perfecting the Reel Rain design. Today's Reel Rain systems are the best ever. They're stronger, simpler to operate, and more dependable. We offer fourteen models from which to choose depending on the number of acres you intend to irrigate. With the optional engine drive each unit becomes a cost effective solution to removing liquid manure from your holding ponds and lagoons.

ATTENTION FARMERS Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

S & S Silo Service Has Experience Over 500 Silos Have Been Relined With Shotcrete

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

WOW!! Can you believe this weather? Many areas that experienced "too dry" in '88 are now experiencing "too wet" in '89.

The weather has caused delays in most all activities relating to agriculture and construction. The weather is also causing forages to grow "like never before." We have been extremely busy all spring and summer and the interest for fall silos is at a very high level.

MAND, WE ARE ADDING EVEN MORE
CREWS, BUT, DON'T DELAY MUCH LONGER OR IT MAY BE DIFFICULT TO MEET YOUR SCHEDULE FOR A POURED CONCRETE SILO. WE'LL DO THE BEST WE CAN TO MEET YOUR NEEDS. PLEASE CALL SOON!!

Remember, we don't have used silos, rebuilt silos or pre-owned silos. The SOLLENBERGER SILO is all new, poured in place on your farm and built for generations of use.

BIG JIM
COLD!

The Jamesway Big Jim system unloads silage from the top, then discharges it down a big pre-formed center hole and out the bottom. Result: You can store high moisture silage—with more total feed value than low moisture silage—without cold weather worries. And without the big price tag of oxygen-limiting, bottom-unloading systems. See us soon for details.

Give Your Pigs A Headstart To Market.

There's an old saying that goes, "well begun is half done." Those are words to remember if you want to get the most for your pigs come market time. Something else to remember is the Master Mix line of starter feeds: Crate-Mate, Premawean and Premapig.

Crate-Mate is the sow replacer that gets even your smallest runts and orphans off to a healthy, profitable start. And Premawean/Premapig is the two phase program that gets your pigs in and out of the nursery with the fastest, leanest gains in the business.

Talk to your Master Mix dealer today. Because if you want to give your pigs a healthy headstart to market, you'll want to give them the Master Mix line of starter feeds.

Premapig™
STARTER RATION

This Little Piggy Went To Market.

If you're looking to increase your operation's profits, getting runts and orphaned pigs to market is a whole lot better than the alternative. And thanks to Crate-Mate, the pelleted sow replacer from Master Mix, little guys like this can get off to a healthier and potentially more profitable start.

But Crate-Mate does more than just reduce your litter's mortality rate. It can be an integral part of your entire early weaning program. Crate-Mate's special formula allows your pigs to extract more nutrition from the feed, for faster and more efficient gains. And the quicker they get into the nursery, the faster you realize your profits.

If you're looking to increase the efficiency of your early weaning program, talk to your Master Mix dealer. Because when it comes to getting little piggies to market, nothing works like Crate-Mate.

The three O's of cow culling

Before long it will be weaning time for most Pennsylvania beef cow/calf operators and now is the time to be thinking ahead towards the task of culling cows from the herd. This spring I read an article in a farm publication about a Virginia cattleman who has defined a cow culling system as "The Three O's" and his observation seems to make a lot of sense.

The O's stand for old, open, and ornery. There is no question that old cows - even though they are nursing a calf this season - need to be culled at weaning time. If you don't know the exact age of cows in your herd, simply inspect their teeth at weaning time. Those cows that have broken mouths and incisors that are worn right down to the gums surely need to be culled. Generally speaking, they are cows 12 to 15 years of age. They are poor risks to go into another calving season, even though they are bred. While you are at it, make an estimate of age on every cow in the herd and write it down.

There is no question that culling open cows is a paying proposition. When calves are weaned, cows should be pregnancy diagnosed by a qualified veterinarian or technician. In most well-managed herds there will be about five percent of cows open and they sure need a one way ticket to McDonald's!

Don't keep open cows with the hope that they will get bred next season - they are poor risks.

The last O is for ornery. Those cows, and nearly everybody has one or two of them with bad temperaments, need to be culled. They are the old sisters that keep the entire herd torn up and make cattle handling difficult. They are pretty easy to spot and you know who they are!

Pennsylvania PRV status

As of June 5, 1989 Pennsylvania had 87 herds (63 breeding herds, 24 feedlots) quarantined for pseudorabies (PRV). The counties quarantined are as follows:

Lancaster (79) Lebanon (4)
Berks (2) Bucks(1)
Huntington (1)

Veterinarians practicing in Southeastern Pennsylvania report that vaccine has helped to reduce losses in infected herds. Response in herds that have few problems from other diseases seem to get a good response. In herds that have other disease problems such as Mycoplasma pneumonia, Haemophilus pneumonia, Atrophic Rhinitis, TGE, etc, response is less than satisfactory.

The State Swine Animal Health Committee, which was appointed in August 1987, and the Bureau of Animal Industry (BAI) jointly submitted recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture for a revised PRV program in March 1988.

Since that time, the BAI and legal counsel have been rewriting the regulations to incorporate the recommendation from the Swine Animal Health Committee. While Pennsylvania's injection rate is low compared to other states, the delay in writing the final regulation has slowed our progress in eradicating pseudorabies.

Ewe management - Prior to breeding

The sheepman's calendar of events in preparation for breeding will need to be based on your choice of lambing times. Prices for slaughter lambs generally are higher early in the season, favoring early lambing, but twinning rate frequently is lower when ewes are mated earlier than September 1. Lamb prices are characteristically low in the late summer and fall. Breeding ewes during September and October, and lambing in February and March will normally yield both a desirable lamb crop and favorable markets assuming the lambs have the genetic potential to reach 100 pounds within 120 days. Ewes of the white face breeds generally have a longer gestation period than black-faced ewes with the average being 147 days gestation and a range from 142-152 days.

Three weeks prior to breeding, the ewes should be wormed and moved to a new pasture for flushing. A good flushing program will return more, than many other management practices. This is the practice of increasing the nutrient intake prior to mating (14-21 days) causing an increase in body weight. Ewes in average condition respond best while fat ewes show little, if any, response. Turning the ewes onto lush pasture alone will be sufficient to flush them.

Avoid using red clover, ladino, or birdsfoot trefoil as flushing pastures. Excessive natural estrogens interfere with heat periods and may prevent ewes from settling. If a good pasture is not available, about 1/2 pound of grain per head per day will work fine.

York County 4-H livestock judging teams placed first in the junior and senior divisions of the 4-H Livestock Judging Contest, which was held earlier this month at the Warrington Greene Farm in Wellsville. Senior team members were Amy Dutrey, Susan Eisenhower, and Karena Rankin. Members of the winning junior team were Jennifer Altobelli, Elizabeth Bishard, and Matt Sellers. In the senior team competition, Lancaster County was second, followed by Adams in third. The second-place junior team was from Berks County, while the Cumberland County team placed third.

Participants judged classes of market steers, Angus heifers, feeder lambs, market lambs, market hogs, and Duroc gilts. The official judges for the contest were Jim Black, Scott Davenport, Robert Livingston, and William Holloway. The contest was sponsored by the York County Pork Producers and the York County Beef Producers associations.

Shorthorn Juniors Elect First Female President

TROY, OH — Mary Kathryn (M.K.) McFarland, Watertown, S.D., was named president of the American Junior Shorthorn Association during the National Junior Shorthorn Show and Youth Conference held in Troy, Ohio. Delegates from 18 state and regional Junior Shorthorn Associations elected McFarland to the top national leadership spot.

McFarland is the first woman to have held the position. The South Dakota State University journalism and animal science student had previously served as the national organization's public relations officer. She plays an active role in her family's Braeloch Farms Shorthorn firm.

Ed McLaughlin, Woodsfield, Ohio, has been named vice president. McLaughlin served as a vital member of the steering committee that coordinated this year's Junior National. He presently serves as president of his state association. McLaughlin follows several of his brothers and sisters from the McLaughlin family's 10 M's Shorthorn operation who also have served as leaders on the national board.

Janet Freed of the Double J Ranch Shorthorn firm, Chickasha, Ok., is the new secretary-treasurer. This is Freed's third year of service on the national board.

Public relations officer for the upcoming year is Louis Meisner, Pontiac, Ill. His family maintains the Twin Maple Farms operation in Jerseyville, Ill. This is his second year of serving on the board.

Other directors of the American Junior Shorthorn Association include: Mary Jett, Beaver, Ok.; Mark Jordan, Rensselaer, Ind.; Donnie Obrecht, Harlan, Iowa; Troy Smith, Manhattan, Ks.; and Ted Vinson, Fithian, Ill.

Producers Enjoy Cattlemen's Summer Field Day

MC KNIGHTSTOWN (Adams Co.) — Fun and learning combined during the recent Pennsylvania Cattlemen's summer field day held earlier this month at Ray and Mary Grimes' South Mountain Farm.

Beef producers received an update from Dr. John Comerford, Penn State assistant professor of animal science, on the Holstein beef project being conducted by the university. Sponsored by the Pennsylvania department of Agriculture, Agway Inc., and Century Farms Inc., the research compares fishmeal and soybean meal as protein sources; compares corn silage and alfalfa haylage with cattle type; determines energy and feed efficiency using different forages and protein sources; and evaluate carcasses of steers in the study.

The research, started in November, has been done with Holsteins fed out to 1,400-1,500 pounds on a diet with no forages and 90 to 95 percent concentrates. There is some indication that the ratio of feed intake to weight gain is higher for Holsteins than beef-cross steers in the corn silage and alfalfa haylage study.

The next Holstein steers will arrive August 1 and the beef crossbred will arrive October 1 for the stage in the research.

In a brief update on how check-off dollars were being used, Dave Ivan, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, reported that the council will be a major sponsor for Penn State football this fall. In addition, the "Beef. Real Food For Real People" campaign is beginning to use ordinary people rather than celebrities.

Panel discussion

In a panel discussion, Ray Grimes, Bob Tibbs of Darlington, Md., Nancy Scott Bushy of Gettysburg, and Dennis Byrne of Nottingham discussed their beef operations.

Grimes has a cow/calf operation and produces grain and hay as cash crops as well as Christmas trees. He cautioned producers interested in diversifying not to grow Christmas trees as the market has become too saturated in the past decade.

Tibbs works full time at the Phi-adelphia Electric Co. and has a 55-cow Charolais herd. He doesn't work a 9-to-5 shift, which helps in working his farm, although it's difficult to stop baling to go to work at 3 p.m.

Tibbs hires a custom baler to bale his hay, he usually harvests about 200 six-foot bales per year and 2,000 square bales of second and third cuttings, which he feeds to young stock and first-calf heifers. Some of his cattle is marketed as freezer beef.

Bushy has purebred Angus and produces commercial beef. At one point she and one full-time employee handled nine different farms, including some battlefield pasture acreage. Her cattle are spread out, but she checks on them three times daily. She creep feeds all calves, which are born outdoors during February, March, and April. Calves are sold in October, usually to one buyer.

Byrne is the herdsman and managing partner of Herr Angus Farms. The farm sold all cows this year and is feeding 600 steers in confinement and 200 on pasture. Waste products from Herr Snack Foods are used in the feeding program. About half the cattle are sold at auction and the remainder are sold direct to packers.

Producers also had the opportunity to take part in a cattle judging contest. Cliff Orley, a cattle consultant with Keystone Cattle Fitting Service and a partner in the Catalyst Cattle Company, was the judge. Richard Miller of Berks County won the event.

Attendees could take special tours of the Mason-Dixon Farms or the Gettysburg Battlefield and Eisenhower Farm. Mason-Dixon Farms has a 1,300-head Holstein herd. An innovative farm, it has 2,100 acres and has a methane generator in which it recycles manure.

Wayne County Fair Plans Livestock Auction

WAYNE (Wayne Co.) — The 13th annual Wayne County Junior Livestock Sale will be Saturday, August 12, 7 p.m. at the Wayne County Fairgrounds.

All prospective buyers will be treated to a beef barbecue from 5 to 6:30 p.m., just prior to the sale.

The sale will serve as a climax for more than 100 young people who have been raising livestock project animals in the 4-H program. Members who are raising beef steers have had their animals on a grain feeding program since last October, while the sheep and hog members placed animals on finishing rations early this spring.

It is expected that 19 steers, 115 hogs and 50 lambs will be offered for sale. All will be of market weight with the steers weighing about 1,000 pounds liveweight, the hogs approximately 200 pounds and the lambs 100 pounds.

Animals will be weighed Friday morning, the day prior to the sale, for the purpose of determining sale weight. They will receive no feed or water from Thursday midnight until after they are weighed.

The sale will be conducted as an auction, with the animals being sold to the highest bidder. Anyone who does not feel comfortable bidding in an auction can make arrangements to have a 4-H leader do the bidding and act as the buyer. Such persons should contact the Agricultural Extension Office to make the necessary arrangements and to secure information on prevailing market prices.

Buyers will receive duplicate ribbons based on judging conducted earlier in the week. Special banners will be presented to the buyers of the three grand champion and three reserve grand champion animals.

Following the sale, arrangements can be made for transportation and processing of the animals.

Exploring Animal Rights Versus Animal Welfare

By Lowell E. Wilson
Professor Animal Science
Penn State

Within the past few years, two separate movements have gained momentum: animal rights concepts and animal welfare concerns. These two causes are similar, but there are also distinct differences in basic doctrines and beliefs. While the number of individuals involved in the animal rights movement is rather small, they are vocal and make strong demands with regard to the use of animals by society. Similarly, animal welfareists continually seek state and federal legislation, generally without the proper input of scientists experienced and knowledgeable about animal management at the farm level.

Animal rights concepts are based on the idea that animals have the same status as humans, that humans should not use any animal products, and that animals should not be used for work that benefits humans.

Throughout the world, approximately 45 percent of all food protein comes from animals. If animals were not to be used for food, and this occurred immediately, there would be a tremendous requirement for food protein from plant production agriculture to replace the protein obtained from meat or milk.

Plant agriculture and animal agriculture interact and are dependent on each other for either to be productive. In many countries, 80 percent or more of the power for plant agriculture is provided by animal power such as water buffalo, horses, or oxen. If animal rights concepts are strictly applied, then there could be no use of animals to provide tillage. The work, if to be done, would necessarily be done by humans. This would lower the standard of living in many countries where the release from agricultural work has resulted in more people employed in the industrial or service industries.

There are individuals within the U.S. agricultural and non-agricultural segments who believe we should regress to a less "modern" type of agriculture—one that would use less fossil fuel power, insecticides, herbicides, and fertilizers.

This belief basically stems from an international concern for environmental quality, which does need attention. The questions are do we regress to the use of humans rather than animals for plant production and how do we compensate for the loss of animal protein in the diet?

Many of the animal rights actions against animal agriculture and biomedical and veterinary research have been illegal. Actions include theft of animals from laboratories and from farms, burning of livestock auctions, and cutting fences.

The number of people responsible for these kinds of acts is very small as is the number of people who unswervingly believe in the animal rights concept. In addition, there can be no compromise with true animal rights activists: according to them animals have the same status as humans, and animals cannot be subjugated to use by humans.

Animal welfare concepts

Animal welfare advocates believe that animals can be used to benefit humans, but this use must be humane. It is the contention of most animal scientists that ideally, and in practice, animal farmers are animal welfare advocates. Although the validity of this statement is substantiated by the fact that the livelihood of the animal farmer depends upon the well being of his animals, this is usually not accepted by non-agricultural animal welfare believers.

Animal welfare advocates have used the term "factory farming" to describe modern animal agriculture. Naturally this term has detrimental connotations to agricultural and to non-agricultural segments of society because it infers that animals are packed into some kind of a factory, with feed going in and inhumanely produced animal products coming out the other end of the building.

There are many reasons why some segments of animal agriculture rely on confinement of animals. Confinement helps increase the survival rate and efficiency of feed utilization as compared to non- or partial-confinement systems. It protects animals from inclement weather, protects offspring from injury, is easier to keep sanitized, and allows easy observation, treatment and individual feeding. In addition, confinement systems are conducive to automation that reduces labor and human error and allows for the easy accumulation of manure for use as fertilizer.

The veal industry has been hardest hit by animal rights activists. They believe the stalls are inhumane and the calves are anemic.

The "fancy" veal production systems, particularly those using individual stalls, have received more criticism than any other aspect of animal agriculture. One of the criticisms is based upon the recommendations of the 1965 Brambell Committee in England, which recommended that animals have the following five basic freedoms: groom themselves, stand up, lie down, stretch, and turn around.

Although individually stalled calves cannot turn around and may not be able to completely groom their entire bodies, practically all veal-production systems involve individual stalls. This has led the animal rights and animal welfare groups to condemn individual stall housing of veal calves, and has resulted in the recommendation that calves be group fed instead of individually fed.

Why individual stalls?

There are several advantages to individual stalls for veal calves as compared to housing them in groups of 10 to 30 calves. They include:

•Individual feeding: It is perhaps more humane to make certain that competition among animals does not result in some animals receiving insufficient amounts to eat.

•Uniform growth: Because of the ability of the farmer to feed his calves differently, depending on weight, appetite, and individual calf differences, the calves grow more uniformly.

•Disease detection: Diseases are detected earlier because it is easier to observe calves when they are individually stalled.

•Easier treatment: Sick calves, or those showing signs of becoming sick, can be observed more closely and treatment can be facilitated more effectively.

•Reduced disease spread: Because there is continuous contact among 10 to 30 different animals in group housing, the spread of disease is quicker and more certain. A calf in an individual stall has contact only with two other

"As long as these cows work, I will," said Paul Lewis, right, herdsman and partner of Ro La Farms Inc. in Rexville N.Y. Agri-King area manager Earl Ginder, left, services the company's number one herd.

Agri-King Helps Dairy Herd Be High Producers

FULTON, IL — Nestled in a valley of the Allegheny Mountains in lower New York is one of the nation's finest dairy herds. It's owned and operated by a farm family who claim "Our cows aren't anything special...we don't do anything special."

However, at the top of the lengthy DHIA report can be found Ro La Farms, of Rexville, N.Y.

Ro La is milking 220 grade Holstein cows that in June reached a production level of 26,211 pounds of milk with 832 pounds of butterfat. The herd consists of 117 first-calf heifers milking at high levels and has a calving interval of 12.7 months with an income over value of feed of $2,076 per cow—almost double the national average for the breed.

The cows are fed a total mixed ration with only one milking ration set at 75 pounds and top dressing in the milk parlor. Top-quality corn silage is fed, and the precisely balanced ration also includes haylage, 44 percent soybean meal, Soy Plus, dry shelled corn, whole cottonseed (seven pounds per cow per day), and a mineral mix of Di-Cal, limestone, bicarbonate, salt, and Agri-King products. No hay is fed except in the pre-freshening ration.

Feedstuff testing and ration balancing are done by Agri-King with Earl Ginder of Manheim, Pa., servicing the account.

The May DHIA report revealed that there were 40 cows milking above 100 pounds a day and that the top cow was a second-calf heifer producing 155 pounds, down two pounds from April.

This dairy herd has ranked among the top 20 Holstein dairy herds in the nation for three consecutive years. No other herd can claim this distinction, to the best of Agri-King's knowledge.

Under the management of herdsman Paul Lewis, the only magic in the operation appears to be in the word "consistency."

"We do everything exactly the same three times a day," Paul noted. "We milk 9:00 a.m., 5:00 p.m., and 1:00 a.m., and our routine is exactly the same every time every day. When something works you don't fool with it."

Ro La has been using Agri-King's feeding programs since December of 1980, and they estimate that production then was somewhere between 17,000 and 18,000 pounds. After hitting the 24,000 pound mark slightly longer than two years ago, the herd hung at that level for the next two years, reaching the 26,000-pound mark only once in that period. This time, however, Paul doesn't think they will drop.

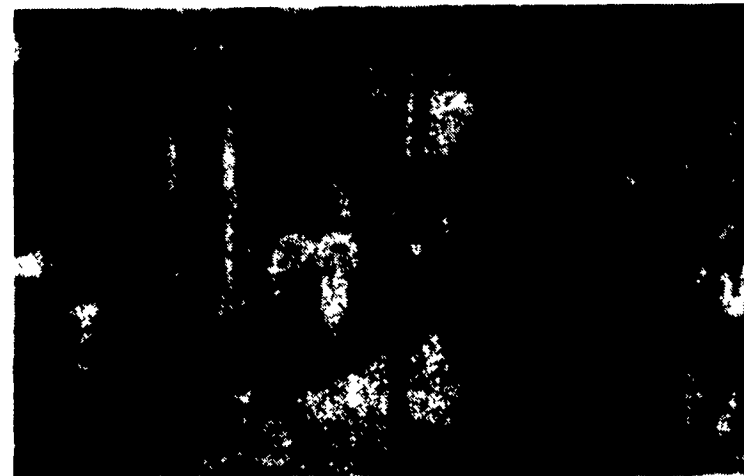

"Things have been going good...really good...for several months," he added. "If we keep this up, we'll hit 27,000 pounds within a year."

The top Holstein herd in the nation for 1988 was at 27,432 pounds.

"The biggest thing I can see here is Agri-King," Paul said. "That's been the turnaround for this herd. From the first day we were on Agri-King, we saw a pound a day increase, and that's the way things have kept going. We had a set goal of 20,000 pounds when we started with them....We made that the first year."

Paul feels that if there are any secrets or magic to reaching this kind of production, it's "making the whole thing work: your forages, your breeding techniques, your feeding program and getting the most out of high producers."

However, all those things are combined with tons of tender loving care and a lot of hard work. It takes three men to care for the herd and each works 12 hour days at Ro La. Milking in the double-four her-

The milking herd is limited and culled to 200 cows at Ro La because of a double-four herringbone parlor. Milkers are Mike Pendleton and Keith Lewis.

This is the first year for the York Farm Credit Scholarships, which were established by the co-operative to help deserving youth continue their education in an agriculture-related field.

The scholarship program is open to all high school seniors and college students. Entrants are judged on character, academic performance and experience in agriculture. Applicants must also be a member or the child of a member of York Farm Credit and attend or plan to attend a four-year college full time.

York Farm Credit, ACA is affiliated with the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore, part of the nationwide Farm Credit System, the nation's leading agricultural lending institution. The Bank provides funds and services to sixteen other ACAs (Agricultural Credit Associations) in the states of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Lester E. Martin, York Farm Credit director, presents a scholarship award to Stephanie J. Meyers.

Ralph H. McGregor, chairman of York Farm Credit Board of Directors, presents a scholarship award to James C. Rexroth.

Du Pont Unveils Returnable Pesticide Container

WILMINGTON, DE — The Du Pont Company has created two new programs to help growers and applicators solve some pesticide container disposal problems.

Under one program, "Asana" XL pyrethroid will be available this year in a new 14-gallon returnable container. In the other program, Du Pont will take back all empty 30-gallon drums that contained one of its pyrethroids.

The reusable, 14-gallon stainless-steel container for "Asana" XL, called "Rebound", will be available in selected areas for use on cotton and vegetable crops.

"Growers and applicators now can take care of more than yield-robbing insects with 'Asana' XL. They also can eliminate the problem of what to do with used containers," said Greg Buss, packaging coordinator for Du Pont Agricultural Products.

ringbone parlor takes 18 hours a day. "We run this place like a business," Paul continued. "But until two months ago, we never had a cow (produce) over 150 pounds (per day)."

Herd health is excellent "our problems are next to nothing," Paul said as he told about a first-calf heifer he had to dry off at 90 pounds.

Ro La Farms are owned and operated by Robert Lewis and his three sons, Larry, Lyle, and Paul.

ing coordinator for Du Pont Agricultural Products.

Buss added that the new container offers growers and applicators several other benefits, including convenient dispensing and reduced exposure risk.

With proper pumping equipment, the "Rebound" container forms a closed system. The seals and connections are designed to prevent leaks when used with pump and metering systems such as the Scienco EP-12H or the HP-20 system.

The convenient size of the reusable containers makes them easy to store, and they are designed for palletized double-stacking.

After use, the 14-gallon "Rebound" container is returned to the chemical supplier, who returns it to Du Pont or its agents.

Regarding the other container disposal program, Buss explains that Du Pont will take back all empty 30-gallon pyrethroid drums that contained "Asana" XL, "Asana", "Pydrin", or "Payoff".

This 30-gallon container return program is available nationwide, according to Buss. Growers and applicators with used drums should contact their distributors or Du Pont representative for information.

Du Pont is active in developing new packaging that reduces the problem of container disposal. The company also is a leading user of water-soluble packages, which produce little waste and are environmentally sound.

"Growers and applicators are concerned about container disposal because of the environmental impact and the added cost," said Buss. "Our new programs are designed to help eliminate the problem of container disposal. And by eliminating that problem, we eliminate an environmental problem."

Exploring Animal Rights

•No cross suckling: Calves in groups have a tendency to suckle body parts of one another, this problem is eliminated with individual stalls.

•Less crowding: No matter how much space is allowed in group housing situations, there is a tendency for calves or other animals to crowd into a corner at times, perhaps even resulting in suffocation. This occurs most often with poultry and pigs.

•Mortality reduced: In research studies there have been less calf deaths in individually stalled calves than in group housing. Also, the permanently sick (morbidity) rate has been less in individual-stall systems.

Milk diets

Although it is true that diets for fancy milk-fed calves contains less iron than do diets for most other farm animals, there are other factors that should be considered.

In truly anemic animals, the first negative response is a lack of growth. If the calf really were anemic, the farmer would add iron to the diet. In addition, the veal calf does have a lower concentration of hemoglobin in its blood, and lesser myoglobin in muscle, giving the meat a consumer-desired pale color.

Although blood and muscle tissues are affected, there is generally no effect on health, behavior, or growth. Therefore, the animal performs quite well and is not noticeably under nutritional stress. Also, milk is a natural offspring feed for most species; the color that accumulates in the muscle is from feeds other than milk.

Therefore, the iron content is sufficient to allow optimum growth and normal behavior and is not an important predisposition toward a deteriorating health status.

Although all segments of animal agriculture strive to manage animals humanely, the animal industries must continue to seek improvements from an animal welfare standpoint. Some animal management practices should be changed and improved, and not all farmers are cognizant of and practice humane care of their animals. More research is needed particularly dealing with identifying and alleviating stress in farm animals, environmental alterations, facility designs, and nutritional adequacy of diets. Research conducted presently considers the well being of the animal and accumulates information about the effects of alternative practices on the animal. However, this research needs to be intensified and the results made available to and used by all concerned with animals.

Naturally there cannot be a discussion of all the factors and considerations involved in this issue. There is a distinct difference between animal rights and animal welfare activists in their basic concepts and in their willingness to discuss humane animal production methods in the animal industry. Animals are extremely important to all societies of the world; if this contribution of animals would disappear, it would cause human hardship.

There needs to be more dialog between animal welfare advocates and those involved in animal agriculture. There are many management practices that are conducted just as much for the benefit of the animal as for the benefit of the farmer who owns the animal.

PULVI-MULCHERS & LANDSCAPE SEEDERS

M 88" PULVI-MULCHER

This 88" Pulvi-Mulcher was originally designed for the European market, to meet transport limits. However, this new width has found a home among American operators who have limited width requirements... like truck farmers, nurserymen, fruit and vegetable growers. Like its Big Brothers, this "88" crushes, harrows and conditions the soil in one pass for better seedbed and bigger yields. It has all the features of other "M" series Pulvi-Mulchers. Separate levers control depth of each of two spring teeth. May be equipped with notched or Crowfoot rollers, with conventional spring teeth or vibrating "S" tines.

LANDSCAPE SEEDERS

Like the larger models, the 5'4" crushes, seeds and in one operation, tucking seed to the top 1/4" of the soil... in a firm clod-free seedbed that gives thick, even stands at greatly reduced seeding costs. The shallower seeding depth is just right for controlled moisture and growth conditions. Maneuverability is a leading feature of Brillion Landscape Seeders. Close coupled to your tractor, the GLP-64 works up close to buildings and fences. The seeding mechanism stops instantly when the seeder is raised or stopped.

DeKalb-Pfizer Makes Late Summer Alfalfa Seeding Recommendations

DEKALB, IL — "Farmers are naturally concerned about maintaining adequate alfalfa acreage production this fall considering the drought stresses, winter injury, and difficulty in getting initial stands established over the last three year period," says Rick Mason, DeKalb-Pfizer Genetics agronomist. The following seeding guidelines are recommended by the company agronomist.

The first step in late summer alfalfa seeding management is soil sampling. "A soil test will indicate the nutrient requirements for maximum alfalfa production and also indicate whether the soil pH is in the desired 6.5 to 7.5 range," says Mason. Optimum soil test levels for alfalfa production on most soils are: available phosphorous, 40-60 pounds per acre; exchangeable potassium, 300-400 pounds per acre; boron, three pounds per acre; sulfur, 30-40 pounds per acre and magnesium, 100 pounds per acre.

The next step is to select alfalfa varieties with proven yield and quality performance characteristics. "Pest resistance and winter-hardiness ratings are available from seed dealers as well as state university trial results," states Mason.

Alfalfa seed should be inoculated with effective strains of viable nitrogen-fixing bacteria. Rhizobia bacteria are host specific organisms that provide nearly all the nitrogen needed for plant growth.

According to Mason, a firm seedbed is essential for successful establishment of alfalfa. A firm seedbed allows an imprint of your heel and shoe sole, but not the arch.

The agronomist recommends the following seeding rates: 12 to 15 pounds per acre with a companion crop or 15 to 18 pounds when direct (clear) seeding is recommended. On heavy soils with good moisture holding capacity, alfalfa should be planted no more than 1/4 to 1/2 inch deep. On very sandy soils that dry quickly near the surface, increase planting depth to 1 to 1 1/2 inches. Twenty to 30 plants per square foot are considered an optimum seeding year stand.

Dairyman Opts For Year-Around Ventilation

BY PAT PURCELL

DILLSBURG (York Co.) — "I was more concerned with the poor quality air than the temperature. The barn was just too hot and stuffy. I wanted something to control the air quality all year around and not just in the summer," said Doug Cope, owner of Four Co Farm in Dillsburg.

"You really need to be concerned about the amount of moisture in the air in a dairy barn. It is very important to herd health to have a dry environment. Very important. The more moisture you have in the air the greater bacterial growth you'll have."

burg. They crop nearly 100 acres and merchandise Four Co Holsteins. The latest exports from the Four-Co Farm are going to Brazil.

"Air quality was real uneven in the barn before we made changes. It was good where the windows and doors were, but where there weren't any it was very poor. We don't have any windows on the upper end of the barn so that gave us some real problems," said Doug. "We had terrible air quality where there weren't windows and doors."

Last summer's heat made the Copes' bank barn unbearable. With windows only on one side of the barn it was nearly impossible to move any air through the structure. Although it was too hot in the barn,

Four Co Farm has not been blessed with an abundance of shade trees. Consequently, relieving conditions in the barn was Doug's only choice.

"Heat definitely affects production and because of the heat last year we had a string of abortions. We also fed some forage which was not real good quality," explained Doug. "Air quality year around was suffering, too. In the summer you can't keep the temperatures way down, but by moving air you can keep humidity low."

Changes to the barn were made last summer and were finished by the first of July. Three fans were installed — each thermostatically controlled. Windows are constantly kept shut and air vents built on all four sides along ceiling of the barn allow air to be pulled in from the outside.

The three fans pull fresh air in from outside through the ventilation ducts which are open on top. One side of the vent ducts are also open. A plastic curtain over the opening inside the barn allows air to be drawn in from the outside and distributed evenly. Metal rods along the bottom of the short curtain adds weight and keeps the curtains shut when the fans are not drawing in air.

All three fans run when the temperature hits between 75 and 80 degrees. When the temperature drops to 50 degrees, fan number two shuts off. Fan number three has five speeds and for every two degrees the temperature falls below 45 degrees the fan slows down one speed.

"Fan number one always runs. It's very important to keep some fresh air coming into the barn constantly. On a real cold day, of course, the amount coming in is minimal, but you still need fresh air coming in," explained Doug.

Doug installed a fake wall on one side of the barn to cover a rough wall and to provide an opening to pull outside air into the barn.

Doug was hoping to hold production in the summer months and hoped the barn renovations would move the herd towards that goal. Milk production is at 20,000 pounds of milk and 694 pounds of fat. Production has stayed at 20,000 pounds for the past two to three years.

Hot summer days depress milk production, but the fluctuating temperatures of spring and fall present additional health problems.

"There's too much variation and not enough consistency in the barn temperatures in the spring and fall. One day it can be cold and the next day in can be as hot as it gets in the summer and that's not good for the herd," said Doug.

"The changes we made did make a difference," said Doug. "It is definitely more comfortable in there to work in. It's much nicer in the summer time, too. The optimum would be to have the barn all sealed up and then have the fans pulling fresh air in from the ducts, but that's not feasible."

Before the vents and fans were added Doug spent much time opening and closing doors and windows all day long to regulate the air flow and temperature, but

It maybe more expensive to make the necessary changes for year round air quality and although Doug has not seen a production increase since the renovations, he still feels his investment was worth it.

"I can't say that it has made a difference in production, but mostly because we have had some other problems which have affected milk production," said Doug. "But we are getting our breeding problems straightened and we look forward to seeing some changes in our milk production very soon."

Doug stills thinks the best thing to do to improve ventilation is to build a free stall barn and leave the sides open. If you can't do that then improvements have to be made in more creative ways.

"With the old barn we have there was no simple way to get more air in there," said Doug. "I guess air quality didn't matter that much when cows were giving 12,000 pounds, but we get a lot more milk out of them now so we've got to keep them comfortable and healthy."

A duct-like box around the barn ceiling is open on top and in front. A heavy plastic curtain covers the opening into the barn when outside air is not being pulled into the barn. Weights in the bottom of the curtain help to keep it closed.

Auger Donated To University Of Delaware

NEWARK, DE — The University of Delaware Research and Education Center recently received a bulk feed bin donated by the ConAgra Broiler Co. The feed bin, which was installed to service the isolation colony houses, will allow more efficient use of the poultry isolation unit. Bagged feed was used formerly requiring manual labor.

Dr. Ed Odor, university poultry pathologist and director of the poultry disease diagnostic laboratory, says ConAgra learned of a need for a bulk feed bin while cooperating with the Research and Education Center in an infectious-bursal-disease challenge test.

"We are very grateful for ConAgra's sensitivity to our needs," Odor says. "This donation demonstrates a cooperative attitude typical of our Delmarva companies."

Bucks County Gets New 4-H Agent

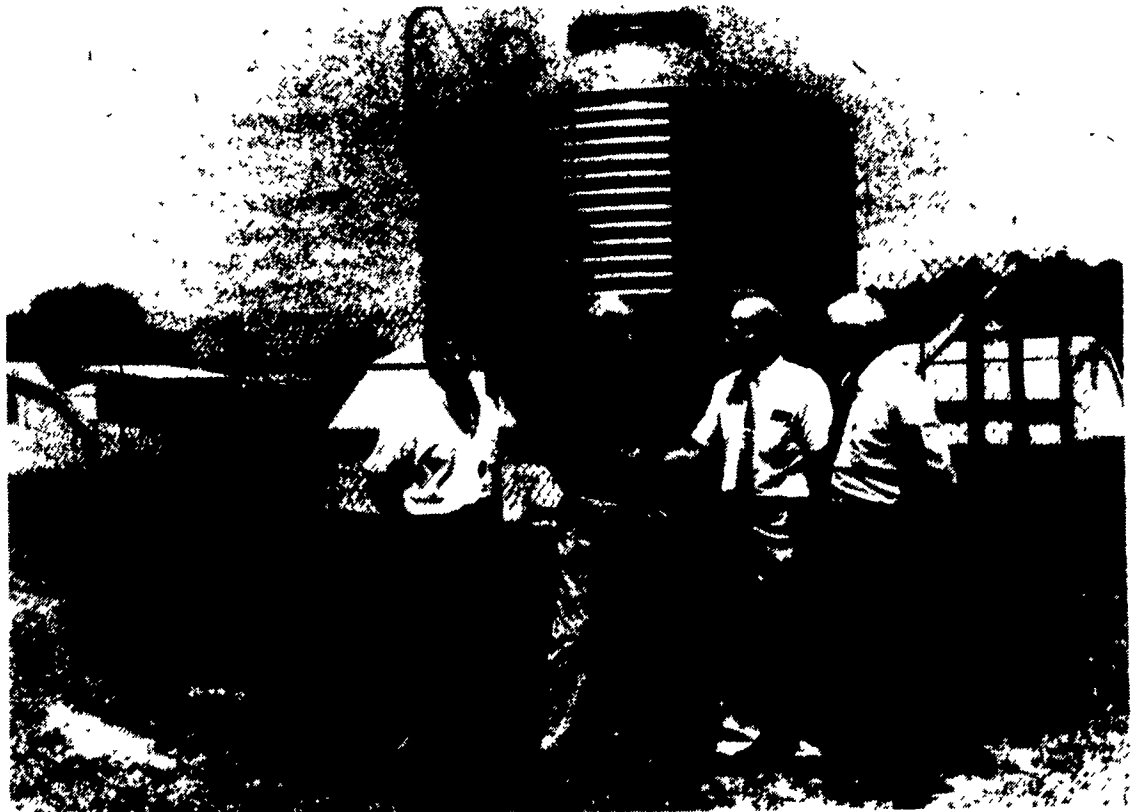

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — April DeGeorge of Adams, Pa., was appointed extension agent/4-H agriculture for Penn State Cooperative Extension in Bucks County. She is a 1989 graduate of Delaware Valley College of Science and Agriculture and earned a B.S. in animal science with a minor emphasis on business administration. She served as treasurer of the Delaware Valley College Dairy Society, officer of the Block and Bridle Club; as treasurer of the Junior Class; was a member of the livestock judging team and resident dorm assistant. She is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Prior to college she was active in Future Farmers of America and 4-H Clubs in New Jersey. While at Delaware Valley she was employed in the livestock and dairy facilities and as a data entry operator for Scott Environmental Technology in Plumsteadville.

As a member of the Bucks County Extension team, DeGeorge will be responsible for the 4-H Agriculture program in Bucks County. She will coordinate related events and activities with 4-H youth and volunteer leaders.

Kay M. Hastings, Bucks County Extension director, says, "April DeGeorge is well qualified for the 4-H Agriculture position. She has had excellent training, hands-on experiences and the technical skills we were seeking. Also, she is concerned about the future of agriculture as a vital industry in Bucks County and is eager to share her expertise with extension youth."

Foraging Around

By Dr. John E. Baylor
Director of Market Development
Beachley-Hardy Seed Company

Time for Seeding Alfalfa

August generally provides good conditions for establishing alfalfa as well as cool season grasses. The soil is warm. Days become shorter and nights become cooler as fall approaches and moisture is usually adequate. Except for winter annual weeds, such as chickweed and henbit, both weeds and insects are usually less troublesome during the establishment period for late summer seedings.

And with all of the weather related problems we've had during the growing season of '89 that affected alfalfa this August should be a good time to establish new seedings to replace stands that were lost or damaged over the summer.

To assure successful late summer alfalfa seedings you must follow the proven rules for getting good stands. These include:

- (1) Use adapted, multiple pest resistant alfalfa varieties.
- (2) Be sure the soil pH and soil fertility are adequate for alfalfa. As always start with a soil test.
- (3) Shoot for a firm seedbed to assure good moisture in the seed zone and to permit uniform, shallow coverage of seed. Seed on time - early to mid August if possible.
- (4) Avoid attempting to establish alfalfa on fields with a potential triazene residue problem.

(5) Seed with a properly calibrated drill to assure uniform seeding. Normally 15 - 20 pounds of seed per acre is sufficient for alfalfa, seeded alone 10 - 12 pounds of alfalfa per acre if seeded with a grass. Cultipacking before and after seeding is important, especially if the seedbed is dry.

The fluid method of seeding has been consistently successful. But be sure to cultipack before and after seeding.

(6) As stated earlier weeds and insects are usually less of a problem for late summer as compared to spring seedings, however, many alfalfa growers still prefer to use a preplant herbicide such as Eptam when grasses are not included in the mixture.

Now let's take a closer look at several different seeding situations you may face this August.

(1) Seeding Alfalfa on a Prepared Seedbed - one of the most likely situations. Follow the rules listed above. A firm seedbed is a must. Heavy rains after seeding with possible serious erosion always a threat when seeding on a prepared seedbed.

(2) No-Tell Seedings in Small Grain Stubble - an excellent method to start a new seeding. Be sure to suppress or destroy any existing vegetation or weeds using an approved herbicide. Volunteer small grains after seeding could be a problem and may require control with a herbicide. The herbicide Poast with a crop oil concentrate is approved. Stand loss from erosion, due to heavy rains, with a no tell seeding is minimized. And time of seeding is not quite as critical with a stubble seeding.

(3) Alfalfa Seeded Immediately after Alfalfa - still not a recommended practice for several reasons. Weeds and insects are likely to be more of a problem. The nitrogen produced by the established alfalfa is most beneficial to corn or another grass crop. And there's still the concern of autotoxicity from the old alfalfa plants. If you insist on following alfalfa immediately after old alfalfa, destroy the existing plant by plowing, heavy disking or approved herbicides and wait at least 2 weeks, preferably 3 weeks, before attempting to reseed.

(4) Replanting a Spring Seeding Failure - if you know what caused the failure last spring and can correct the problem there's no reason why you can't reseed the field this August. Autotoxicity should not be a problem. But destroy the existing vegetation,

(5) Patching Up Thin Stands of Spring Seedings - a common problem this year. However it's one that we haven't had much success with. If large areas are void of alfalfa plants, destroy the existing vegetation in those areas and start over. Over-seeding with timothy in early September may be one way to get something established to give you more feed next year.

The queen of forages has had a rough year. But alfalfa is still queen of the forages, and a little extra effort to get a stand established in August will mean more high-quality forage in 1990.

Magnum Tractors Updated To Meet Customer Needs

RACINE, WI — Case IH 7100 Series Magnum tractors have been updated in response to customer requests. The tractors feature fuel-efficient engines and 18-speed full-powershift transmissions.

Improvements to the Magnum line have been made with the operator in mind. Specific changes include:

- Addition of third and fourth reverse speeds for better maneuverability and easier use with loaders, especially the Model 710 front loader;

- A gear shift indicator located in the lower instrumentation display window for quick reference;

- A deluxe air-suspension seat equipped with an operator-controlled air compressor that provides individualized adjustments;

- Improved lighting with a new mini-lamp that illuminates the entire instrumentation panel; and factory-installed radio and fourth hydraulic remote.

Additionally, the updated tractors have new side decals as well as a new Magnum emblem located between the headlamps.

The Magnum line includes four models with a mechanical-front-drive option available on each. All Magnum tractors are covered by a 5-year/5,000-hour warranty, the longest standard tractor warranty in the industry.

The Magnum tractors established records in the sound, PTO, and drawbar performances categories of last year's Nebraska Tests. The Magnum 7110, with a rating of 69.5 dBA, set a record as the first tractor to break the 70 dBA sound level. The Magnum 7140 was rated at 208.85 hp for maximum PTO hp at any engine speed, making it the first 2WD/MFD tractor ever to exceed 200 hp.

Case IH has updated its Magnum tractors in response to customer requests. New features include third and fourth reverse speeds, a gear-speed indicator, deluxe air seat, and improved instrumental lighting. Model 7110 at 130 PTO horsepower is one of four tractor models in the Magnum line.

To match the newly updated 710 front loader, which fits both tractors, Case IH offers the Model two-wheel-drive and MFD tractors.

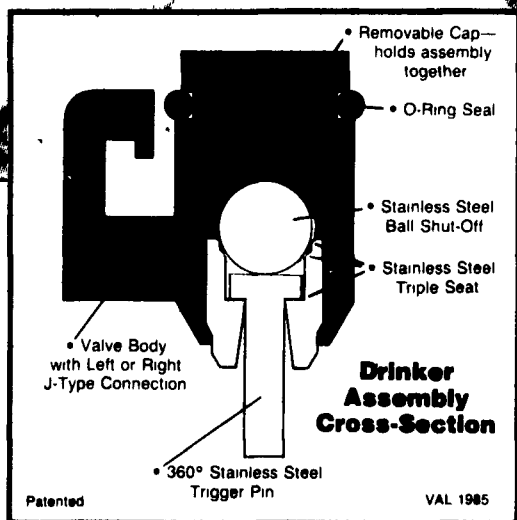

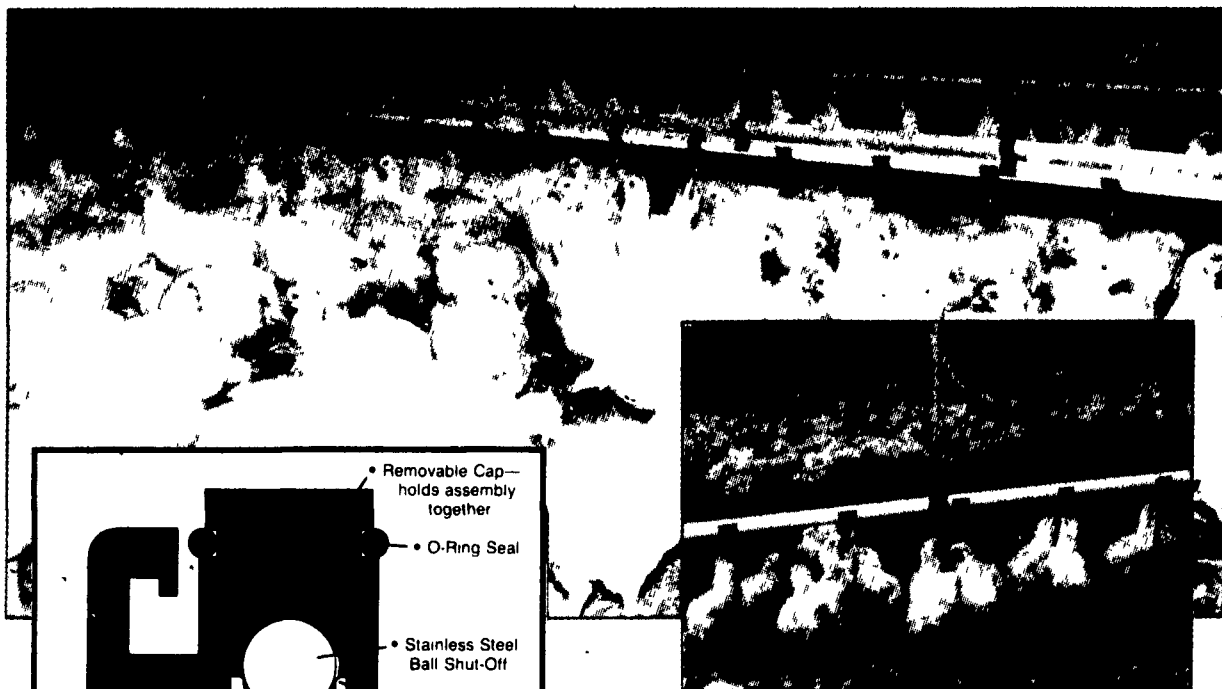

Loader options include bucket spill guard, bale and silage grapple, and mechanical self-leveling. The loader may be equipped with an 83-inch or 96-inch bucket. The Model 710 loader has a standard lift capacity of 3,650 pounds and 3,800 pounds with the self-leveling feature.

POULTRY FLOOR WATERING SYSTEM FOR BROILERS, BREEDERS, TURKEYS OR DUCKS

NIPPLE DRINKER FEATURES

- Day-old birds can activate the valve from any side, any angle (Mini drinkers required only if birds have been debeaked day-old)
- Triple stainless steel valve seat made to precision specifications. No rubber seats to replace. Drinker operates on low 1/4 lb. pressure. Minimizes wet litter problems
- Each nipple can serve 15 broilers, 10 heavy breeders or 8 turkeys.
- Drinker mounts on water line saddle by means of a "J" flange. Easy assembly and easy replacement.
- Drinker is easy to take apart & re-assemble. All parts are accessible and removable by simply pulling the cap out of the body.
- New Mini-Trough Drinker available for day old debeaked birds. Attaches to Nipple Floor Watering System, and remains through grow-out period. There is no need to remove the mini-trough between flocks.

SYSTEM FEATURES

- Water is always accessible, and always clean. The system is completely enclosed. Nipples are self cleaning, and they do not collect dirt. Since the nipple "washes" every time it is triggered, it does not get clogged by feed or feather dust
- Drier litter is maintained because of the reliable triple seal and low water pressure. There is less spillage and no squirting with this low pressure (1/4 lb or less) watering system.
- The pressure regulator (30VVR332) can provide and maintain a uniform 1/4 lb. pressure for the entire length of a 500 ft 1/2 inch plastic water pipe.
- Inspection and maintenance are easy. If a nipple needs replacement, simply turn to disengage the "J" flange and pull the unit out of the "saddle" or pipe connector. The new nipple may be inserted and locked in place by turning to engage the "J" flange. There are no threaded parts, clips or screws.
- Other maintenance tasks are as easy. Leveling may be done by means of adjustment straps on the winch cables. There are no cups, troughs or founts to clean
- Simple installation for floor systems. Plastic water pipe is clamped to 1" conduit sections, coupled together for continuous support. Conduit is suspended from winch system at 12' (max.) intervals. The 1/2" plastic water pipe clamps to conduit in every 24".

8 1/2 HP Kawasaki Gasoline Engine With Clutch & 6 to 1 Reduction

Specially designed shaft to power hydraulic pumps, etc.

This unit is basically designed to transmit power from engine to power take off shaft equipment. The reason for this design, an extra shaft is built into this unit so power can be transmitted to the hydraulic system by using belts and pulleys. This shaft is placed above the splined shaft, and runs hydraulic pump with or without power take off shaft in gear. No need to take the rope rewind starter off to mount pulley on front of the engine. This simple design eliminates special machined pulley adaptors. Reduction housing and cover is a rugged cast iron construction. All shafts are of special selected steels and are heat treated and hardened at wear points. All ball and needle bearing construction for long life. A heavy-duty ball-loc type clutch is used. This unit has few moving parts, thus it should give many years of service. Clutch adjustments are made from the outside, (very simple).

A specially selected engine, the Kawasaki KF-82 8 1/2 HP, is used for your convenience. The engine is also made with rugged construction, and has smooth operation. This engine has high torque at low RPMs, thus is well adapted to the clutch and reduction unit.

Dairy Tips By Dr. John Clark

MILK PROTEIN

Can you change the protein content of milk by feed & nutrition? Some but not very much. The formation of protein in milk is a complex mechanism that involves genetics, environment, & nutrition. Genetics is by far the single most important factor. Protein is only slightly influenced by environment & nutrition.

For example, although the effects are not drastic, feeding a ration too low in diet protein may reduce milk protein while feeding excessive levels of protein will normally not increase it. Also, feeding excessive energy may increase protein while reducing butterfat.

By selecting bulls with high protein yields, you assure a good genetic potential for milk protein. Correct feeding & management must be followed to help the cows reach their potential for milk protein as well as production of all other milk components along with optimum volume.

PROBLEMS WITH HEAT STRESS?

June and July were kind to the cows as far as heat stress, however August and September may be worse. Purina has approved a new stress fighting product just in time for this summer's heat. We are proud to tell you about NEW Purina Yeast Pak.
